New York and Chicago having gone wild over it, where it was greeted with packed houses night after night. We are informed that some of the original New York cast are still with the company, but will appear in this city, and there is no reason why it should not be produced in the same masterful manner that it has elsewhere.

PORT EDWARDS MAN IS

INJURED IN COLLISION.

Carl Topping of Port Edwards was quite badly bruised up on Saturday evening by colliding with a farmer's wagon on Second avenue south, while on his way to this city. Topping was riding on a motor cycle and when he turned out for the team the farmer turned the same way, hence the collision. He was knocked unconscious by the impact, but subsequently regained consciousness and went to Dr. Hodgman's office where his cuts and bruises were attended to. He has since been at Riverside hospital where he is rapidly mending.

RAILWAY COMMISSION STATES

WATERWORKS MATTER IS O. K.

In view of the fact that there has been considerable discussion thru the columns of the local newspapers and otherwise concerning the receipts and disbursements of the waterworks system of this city, in which there was more or less criticism concerning those who have had the matter in charge, it may be interesting to the public to read the report of the railway commission, two members of which were here and checked up the books of the company. Their letter to Mayor Cohen is as follows:

Hon. Joseph A. Cohen, Mayor, Grand Rapids, Wisconsin.

Dear Sir:—In compliance with your recent request to our accounting representative we are sending you under separate cover a copy of the memorandum on the installation of accounts for the Water Department, City of Grand Rapids, Wisconsin. You will notice that the schedules and statements therein set forth show in our opinion the condition of the utility as of Oct. 17, 1913 and the results of operation for the first quarter of the present fiscal year.

Also in accordance with your request we have given considerable consideration to the statement submitted by the Water Department to this Commission on Feb. 2, 1913.

A copy of the statement follows:

GRAND RAPIDS WATER WORKS REPORT.

Trial Balance for six months, July 1, 1912 to January 1, 1913.	$ 85,000.00
Bonds	4,625.73
Service (Six Mo.)	1,583.18
Electric Pumping	2,311.41
Distribution	1,589.24
General Expenses	773.99
Undistributed	34.10
Material and Supplies	2,717.08
Plant and Equipment	148,129.97
Steam Pumping Plant Expense	86.41

Cash $157,655.38 $ 89,625.65

Persons familiar with accounting matters the correctness of the above statement is clearly evident. This statement is a gross misrepresentation of the facts. It does not contain any account showing that the assets appearing on the debit side are offset by the interest or ownership of the city in the plant. In partnership bookkeeping this offsetting account is called "Investment" of the partners, in a private corporation it is called "Capital Stock" and "Surplus" and in a municipally owned utility it is termed "City Bounty" by this Commission. In our opinion the above statement is not even a complete trial balance for the reason that it does not include all the accounts. The amount of $8,029.65 being the difference between the debit and credit sides in this statement cannot be termed "Cash" nor described by any other single accounting term. The existing facts were shown in the current items and if those items were correctly stated then this difference might be designated "City Equity," "Surplus," etc.

The Balance Sheet appearing on page 8 of the accompanying report shows in our opinion the condition of the utility as of Oct. 17, 1913, as represented by the books of the Water Department on that date.

Wishing that we have made ourselves clear in this matter, we are,

Very truly yours,

RAILROAD COMMISSION OF WISCONSIN.

NEWLYWEDS ARE VISITING

FRIENDS IN THIS CITY.

Mr. and Mrs. Philip Canning arrived in the City this morning from Port Arthur, Ontario, and will visit a few days at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Canning, parents of the groom. Mr. and Mrs. Philip Canning were married at Port Arthur on Monday of this week, the bride being Miss Agnes Whitley, before her marriage. The groom was a resident of this city all his life until he went to Port Arthur and has many friends here who will wish him happiness in his matrimonial venture. The Tribune extends congratulations.

A WRONG INTERPRETATION.

One of our exchanges aptly remarks that this fall of sleeping out of doors and being in the open air all that is possible may be a good thing for mankind in general, but that it does not apply to the farmers' machinery. Of course that should be out of doors more or less, but it should not be left out every night and all winter for the rains and snows to warp and decay it. Many a farmer is wasting out a percentage of his profits each year by leaving his machinery out in the weather at times when it should be under shelter. Of course it is a good thing for the machinery manufacturer as the sooner a machine is worn out, the quicker a farmer will need another one of the same kind, but if farmers will take the trouble to read the advice of Machinery Manufacturers they will find that they are continually harping on the subject of properly housing farm machinery. They want the machines they send out to give proper service and prove profitable to the farmer, for they know that if he is prosperous, they will be. The more prosperous a farmer is the more acres he will cultivate and the more machinery they can sell and get paid for, and that is what they want. Many a man who tells of the small profits of the farming business can be found to be the man who does not take proper care of his machinery, which if he did would net him a good profit on the trouble and expense necessary.

Death of Mrs. Mary Yeshke.

Deceased survived by five children, four sons and one daughter, they being Joseph, Frank, Adolph and Henry Yeshke. Mrs. P. Prockpelt. The funeral was held on Tuesday from the Polish Catholic church in the town of Sigel, the services being conducted by Father Kulig.

DISTRICT ATTORNEY SUES

MAISHFIELD CANDIDATE

District Attorney Chas. E. Briere, in company with Undersheriff Bluet, were in the city yesterday, the former for the purpose of starting an action to, circuit court against A. G. Felker of this city, for slander, and the latter to serve the papers. The summons was served on the defendant yesterday by Mr. Bluet and also a subpoena, which asks for his appearance before Court Commissioner E. M. Downing November 16th at 10 a. m. to be examined as an adverse witness.

In an interview with Mr. Briere, that gentleman stated that this was only a starter on similar cases, as he intended to give several more persons in Marshfield a chance to prove some of the statements they have been making in reference to him.

His appearance here and the beginning of the action against Mr. Felker has caused quite a sensation.

CANADIAN COUNTRY

NOT TO HIS LIKING

J. C. Vanatta of Brookston, Ind., spent several days in this city and vicinity last week looking after some business matters. Mr. Vanatta had recently returned from the Saskatchewan country where he had been to collect some money on mortgages that had been lent to the farmers there by his company. He was there for several weeks and according to the observations he made, was not very favorably impressed with that part of the country from a business point of view.

Mr. Vanatta is interested in farming himself down in Indiana, and is quite conversant with what a farm ought to produce, and what it generally does produce in dollars and cents down in his country. He stated that it was his general observation that the farmers in the Canadian country were not making good, and that there was not the least chance in the world for them to do so, as conditions exist at the present time. When a man lends money in that country he gets 12 percent for the risk he takes, and often this is not enough to come out whole when the losses are figured in.

The farmers in many instances are far removed from the railroad, so that their products at the farm are worth only a part of what they would be at the station or the market where they will be used. The water in most places is so strongly impregnated with alkali that it is impossible to drink it, and has to be hauled in by rail and taken to the farm by team. The water has not only to be hauled for a long distance but it has to be paid for besides. In some instances the farmers dig sink holes on the lowest places on their land, and the water drains from the surface into these holes and is used for drinking. This is considered pretty good water by the people who have got used to it, but to a man just arrived is not very palatable.

The banks up in that country accept deposits but they do not lend any money, so that it does not matter what kind of security a farmer has in the way of land and growing crops, he can not secure any money to help him over his harvest or anything, if there had been any money in that country it would have been sold during the winter season. He stated that there were about six months when it was necessary to feed cattle, and that as yet ensilage corn had not been raised successfully there. He had no doubt that in time it would be possible to turn that country to advantage, but at the present time with the undeveloped state of the country it looked like a hopeless task. He told of one man who went there and started in farming with a section of land all clear of debt. The first year he ran behind a little and had to mortgage his land. The next season the performance was repeated and it was necessary to put on a bigger mortgage. The result was that after this had happened for a number of years and each season saw him just a little further in the hole, he threw it up and went back to the states where he had been able to make a little something over his expenditures every year.

Mr. Vanatta stated that many Indians and people had been lured to the Canadian Northwest by the agents of the government who had circulated thru that part of the country and painted the advantages of that country in glowing terms. These people were generally worse off than those who had gone there from Wisconsin as the Wisconsin people were used to the cold weather and long winters of this state, while the Indians were entirely new to it and in many instances became disgusted with the country after one season's experience. He did not think it was a smart country to locate in, to live in, nor to invest money in, and from the trend of his remarks, would be glad if his company could get their principal back, donating the interest to the settlers.

The pictures painted by these visitors to this new country is in marked contrast to the actual experience of settlers who have come to Wisconsin in years past, and who now, in many instances are selling their farms, moving to the city and living from the interest that their money produces. They encountered cold weather and hard winters here, and they worked early and late but they always had before them the assurance of success, and there was always a method by which they could make enough money to support themselves and family in case the farm did not produce quite as much as they had figured on. Many of them came here without money or experience, and yet every year they paid off a part of the mortgage and got a little nearer to the goal for which they were striving. There is a vast difference between running behind a little each year and that of being able to pay off a little of the mortgage as each season rolls around. Up in that country there is just one thing to depend on, and that is the crop produced by the land, and if this fails, the settler, especially if he is a new man, is up against it.

have, beginning Friday, Nov. 7th at 2 o'clock when the meeting will be called to order.

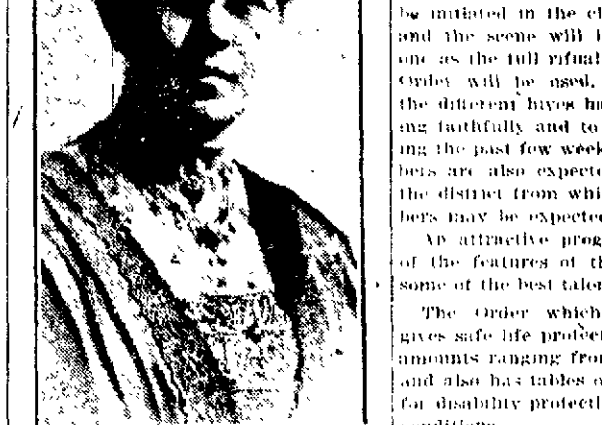

The committees have been hard at work and the most thorough preparations have been made. A great deal of enthusiasm has been aroused in local Maccabee circles and a great increase in membership is the result.

There will be about 20 candidates to be initiated in the class at this time, and the scene will be an impressive one as the full ritualistic work of the order will be used. The guards of the different hives have been practicing faithfully and to good effect during the past few weeks. Visiting members are also expected from all over the district from which visiting members may be expected.

An attractive program will be one of the features of the occasion with some of the best talent of the city.

The order which they represent gives safe life protection to women in amounts ranging from $500 to $5,000 and also has tables of rates providing for disability protection under varying conditions.

They have over 167,800 members, all women, and 2,854 subordinate lodges. The establishment and control as well as the management, clerical work, and soliciting are and always have been

STOCK FAIR WILL BE HELD

HERE ON TUESDAY NEXT.

The regular monthly stock fair will be held in this city on Tuesday, November 11th, on the east side Market Square. Those who are interested in affairs of this kind should make it a point to be present, as the indications are that there will be a large attendance.

The Ireland Packing company will pay you the highest market price for your stock or anything in that line that is fit to kill.

The growing company is still offering an eighth of less to the farmer than brings in the greatest number of empty kegs.

Milk cows are in demand and chickens being a good price. Veal is also in demand at a good price.

All second hand furniture will be sold at a reasonable price, while Geo. T. Rowland & Sons will give a sack of flour to the person who brings in the most eggs, and there will also be a prize for the next greatest number.

There is also a demand for several heavy horses.

Moulton-Akey.

Mrs. Ruth Moulton of this city and Mr. George Akey of Randolph were married in this city on Tuesday afternoon at the home of the bride's parents, Mrs. J. C. Logan of the Methodist church officiating. Only the immediate relatives of the contracting parties were present. After the ceremony a wedding dinner was served to the assembled guests and the young couple left the same evening for Randolph where they will make their home. The bride is the oldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Moulton and has many friends here who will wish her a happy journey thru life. The Tribune wishes with these in extending congratulations.

Vomits Seven Inch Lizard.

Justville Record.—Mrs. Wm. Armon, who went to Waupaca while her husband is taking treatment for his eyes at Milwaukee, has been relieved of a 7-inch lizard by a physician at Waupaca.

Floyd Armon, who was called to Waupaca by the serious illness of his daughter, returned to the city yesterday with the information. It seems she had been bothered for the past few years with troubles, originating in the stomach but the cause had not been guessed.

Her physician, an old time doctor, at Waupaca, surprised a foreign body and treated her accordingly. In a fit of vomiting she discharged the lizard which was immediately burned, was allowed when released and blind. Cause of this nature have been known before and the existence of a living animal in the human stomach is supposed to come from drinking water, the person taking either the egg or the foetus in extreme infancy.

DISTRICT ATTORNEY SUES MARSHFIELD CANDIDATE.

District Attorney Chas. E. Briere, in company with Under Sheriff Bluff, were in the city yesterday, the former for the purpose of starting an action in circuit court against A. G. Pelker of this city, for slander, and the latter to serve the papers. The summons was served on the defendant yesterday by Mr. Bluff, and also a subpoenae, which asks for his appearance before Court Commissioner B. M. Deming, November 6th, at 10 a. m., to be examined as an adverse witness.

In an interview with Mr. Briere, that gentleman stated that this was only a starter on similar cases, as he intended to give several more persons in Marshfield a chance to prove some of the statements they have been making in reference to him.

His appearance here and the beginning of the action against Mr. Pelker has caused quite a sensation.

CANADIAN COUNTRY NOT TO HIS LIKING

J. C. Vanatta of Brookston, Ind., spent several days in this city and vicinity last week looking after some business matters. Mr. Vanatta had recently returned from the Saskatchewan country where he had been to collect some money on mortgages, that had been lent to the farmers there by his company. He was there for several weeks and according to the observations he made, was not very favorably impressed with that part of the country from a business point of view.

Mr. Vanatta is interested in farming himself down in Indiana, and is quite conversant with what a farm ought to produce, and what it generally does produce in dollars and cents down in his country. He stated that it was his general observation that the farmers in the Canadian country were not making good, and that there was not the least chance in the world for them to do so, as conditions exist at the present time, when a man lends money up in that country he gets 12 per cent for the risk he takes, and often this is not enough to come out whole when the assets are figured in.

The farmers in many instances are far removed from the railroad, so that their products at the farm are worth only a part of what they would be at the station or the market where they will be used. The water in most places is so strongly impregnated with alkali that it is impossible to drink it, and has to be hauled in by rail and taken to the farm by team. The water has not only to be hauled for a long distance, but it has to be paid for beside. In some instances the farmers dig sink holes on the lowest place on their land, and the water drains from the surface into these holes and is used for drinking. This is considered pretty good water by the people who have got used to it, but to a man just arrived is not very palatable.

The banks up in that country accept deposits but they do not lend any money, so that it does not matter what a farmer has in the way of land and growing crops, he can not secure any money to help him in his harvest or threshing, a thing that is often absolutely necessary in a new country. This condition of affairs often works great injury to the man who is struggling to get on his feet in that country and means the difference between success and failure.

Mr. Vanatta was of the opinion that it would never be possible to do much in the cattle raising line there, owing to the extremely low winters and the excessively cold during the winter season. He stated that a farmer who has in six months when it was necessary to feed cattle, and that as yet ensilage corn had not been raised successfully there. He had no doubt that in time it would be possible to farm that country to advantage, but at the present time with the undeveloped state of the country it looked like a hopeless task. He told of one man who went there and started in farming with a section of land all clear of debt. The first year he ran behind a little and had to mortgage his land. The next season the performance was repeated and it was necessary to put on a bigger mortgage. The result was that after three years had passed for a number of years and each season saw him just a little further in the hole, he threw it up in disgust and went back to the states where he had been able to make a little something over his expenditures every year.

Mr. Vanatta stated that many Indians people had been lured to the Canadian Northwest by the agents of the government who had circulated thru that part of the country and painted the advantages of that country in glowing terms. These people were generally worse off than those who had gone there from Wisconsin as the Wisconsin people were used to the cold weather and long winters of this state, while the Hoosiers were entirely new to it and in many instances became disgusted with the country after one season's experience. He did not think it was a good country to locate in, to live in, nor to invest money in, and from the trend of his remarks, would be glad if his company could get their principal back, donating the interest to the settlers.

The pictures painted by these visitors to this new country in marked contrast to the actual experience of settlers who have come to Wisconsin in years gone by, and who now, in many instances are selling their farms, moving to the city and living from the interest that their money produces. They encountered cold weather, and hard winters here, and they worked early and late but they always had before them the assurance of success, and there was always a method by which they could make enough money to support themselves and family in case the farm did not produce quite as much as they had figured on. Many of them came here without money or experience, and yet every year they paid off a part of the mortgage and got a little nearer to the goal for which they were striving. There is a vast difference between running behind a little each year and that of being able to pay off a little of the mortgage as each season rolls around. Up in that country there is just one thing to depend on, and that is the crop produced by the land, and if this fails, the settler, especially if he is a new man, is up against it.

Playa Armon, who was called to Waupaca by the serious illness of his mother, returned to the city yesterday with the information. It seems she had been bothered for the past few years with troubles originating in the stomach but the cause had not been guessed.

Her physician, an old time doctor at Waupaca, surmised a foreign body and treated her accordingly. In a fit of vomiting she discharged the lizard. It was immediately burned, was alive when released and blind. Cases of this nature have been known before and the existence of a living animal in the human stomach is supposed to come from drinking water, the person taking either the egg or the foreigner in extreme infancy.

PORT EDWARDS MAN IS INJURED IN COLLISION.

Carl Topping of Port Edwards was quite badly bruised up on Saturday evening by colliding with a farmer wagon on Second avenue south, while on his way to this city. Topping was driving on a motor cycle and when he turned out for the team the farmer turned the same way, hence the collision. He was knocked unconscious by the impact, but subsequently regained consciousness and went to Dr. Edgman's office where his cuts and bruises were attended to. He has since been at Riverview hospital where he is rapidly mending.

RAILWAY COMMISSION STATES WATERWORKS MATTER IS O. K.

In view of the fact that there has been considerable discussion through the columns of the local newspapers and otherwise concerning the receipts and disbursements of the waterworks system of this city, in which there was more or less criticism concerning those who have had a matter in charge, it may be interesting to the public to read the report of the railway commission, two members of which were here and checked up the books of the company. Their letter to Mayor Cohen is as follows:

Hon. Joseph A. Cohen, Mayor, Grand Rapids, Wisconsin.

Dear Sir:—In compliance with your recent request to our accounting representative we are sending you under separate cover a copy of the memorandum on the installation of accounts for the Water Department, City of Grand Rapids, Wisconsin. You will notice that the schedule and statement therein set forth show in our opinion the condition of the utility as of Oct. 17, 1913, and the results of operation for the first quarter of the present fiscal year.

Also in accordance with your request we have given considerable consideration to the statement submitted by the Water Department to this Commission on Feb. 2, 1913.

A copy of the statement follows:

GRAND RAPIDS WATER WORKS REPORT.
Trial Balance for six months, July 1, 1912 to January 1, 1913.	$ 85,000.00
Balances	4,625.73
Revenue (Six Mo.)	1,582.18
Accounts Receivable	2,312.41
Electric Pumping	1,320.24
Distribution	773.99
Undistributed	34.10
Material and Supplies	2,717.08
Plant and Equipment	148,139.97
Steam Pumping Plant Expense	96.41
	$187,655.36
Cash	$ 89,625.83
	$ 68,029.53

To persons familiar with accounting matters the incorrectness of the above statement is clearly evident. This is the case as a gross misrepresentation of the debit side of the account showing that the assets appearing on the debit side are offset by the interest or ownership of the city in the plant. In partnership bookkeeping this offsetting account is called "Investment" of the partners, in a private corporation it is called "Capital Stock" and in a municipally owned utility it is termed "City Equity" by this Commission. In our opinion the above statement is not even a complete trial balance for the reason that it does not include all the accounts. The amount of $8,029.53 being the difference between the debit and credit sides in this statement cannot be termed "Cash," nor described by any other single accounting term. If the existing facts were shown in the correct items and if those items were correctly stated then this difference might be designated "City Equity," "Surplus," etc.

The Balance Sheet appearing on page 8 of the accompanying report shows in our opinion the condition of the utility as of Oct. 17, 1913, as represented by the books of the Water Department on that date.

Trusting that we have made ourselves clear in this matter, we are,

Very truly yours,

RAILROAD COMMISSION OF WISCONSIN.

L. E. GETTLE, Secretary.

NEWLYWEDS ARE VISITING FRIENDS IN THIS CITY.

Mr. and Mrs. Philip Canning arrived in the city this morning from Port Arthur, Ontario, and will visit a few days at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Canning, parents of the groom. Mr. and Mrs. Philip Canning were married at Port Arthur on Monday of this week, the bride being Miss Agnes Whytock before her marriage. The groom was a resident of this city all his life until he went to Port Arthur and has many friends here who wish him happiness in his matrimonial venture. The Tribune extends congratulations.

A WRONG INTERPRETATION.

One of our exchanges aptly remarks that this fall of sleeping out of doors and being in the open air all that is possible may be a good thing for mankind in general, but that it does not apply to the farmers' machinery. Of course, that should be out of doors more or less also, but it should not be left out every night and all winter for the reason that it is a waste of money. Many a farmer is wasting quite a percentage of his profits each year by leaving his machinery out in the weather at times when it should be under shelter. Of course it is a good thing for the machinery manufacturer as the sooner a machine is worn out the quicker a farmer will need another one of the same kind, but if farmers will take the trouble to read the advice of Machinery Manufacturers they will find that they are continually harping on the subject of properly housing farm machinery. They want the machines they send out to give proper service and prove profitable to the farmer, for they know that if he is prosperous they will be. The more prosperous a farmer is the more acres he will cultivate and the more machinery he can sell and get paid for, and that is what they want. Many a man who tells of the small profits of the farming business can be found to be the man who does not take proper care of his machinery, which if he did would net him a good profit on the trouble and expense necessary.

Death of Marjorie Kellogg.

The people of Grand Rapids were shocked on Wednesday evening to learn of the death of Miss Marjorie Kellogg, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Kellogg, who passed away that evening from heart failure. While it was not generally known to the public, it seems that Miss Kellogg had been afflicted with a weak heart for some time past, or ever since she was prosstrated with an attack of influenza, the condition some time ago, however, there was nothing in her appearance or actions to indicate that she was not enjoying the best of health, so that her sudden demise came as a great surprise to her many friends in this city.

Mr. and Mrs. Kellogg had held a wedding anniversary at their home on Wednesday evening at which there was a large number of friends present, and Miss Marjorie had been one of the kindest participants in the festivities. The next afternoon she had complained of being tired and went to her room and lay down and when found by her mother after supper was unconscious. Physicians were hurriedly summoned, but in spite of all they could do the young lady never regained consciousness.

Miss Kellogg was eighteen years of age and was born and reared in this city where she went to school at the time of her death. She was a bright, lovable young lady, and it is doubtful if there was another one who will be missed more by her companions than Miss Marjorie.

The funeral was held on Saturday morning from the Episcopal church, Bishop Walker of Fond du Lac conducting the services. Mr. and Mrs. Kellogg have the sympathy of their many friends in this city in their sad affliction.

The Passing of Hugh Hurley.

Monfion-Macy.

Miss Ruth Monfion of this city and Mr. Grover Macy of Rudolph were married in this city on Tuesday afternoon at the home of the bride's parents, Rev. H. C. Logan of the Methodist church officiating. Only the immediate relatives of the contracting parties were present. After the ceremony a wedding dinner was served to the assembled guests and the young couple left the same evening for Rudolph where they will make their home. The bride is the oldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Monfion and has many friends here who will wish her a happy journey thru life.

The Tribune unites with these in extending congratulations.

Veronica Second, Mrs. Wm. Armon, who went to Waupaca while her husband is taking treatment for his eyes at Milwaukee, has been relieved of a 7-inch band by a physician at Waupaca.

Floyd Armon, who was called to Waupaca by the serious illness of his mother, returned to the city yesterday with the information. It seems she had been bothered for the past few years with troubles originating in the stomach but the cause had not been guessed.

Her physician, an old time doctor, at Waupaca, submitted a foreign body and treated her accordingly. In a fit of vomiting she disengaged the band and it was immediately burned, was alive when released and blind. Cases of this nature have been known before and the existence of a living animal in the human stomach is supposed to come from drinking water, the person taking either the egg or the forerunner in extreme infancy.

The League of Lost Causes

By H. M. EGBERT Being the Romantic Adventures of Paul Lane, American Millionaire

How the Kaiser Went to Paris

(Copyright, 1913, by W. G. Chapman.)

Hosen for his position, his tactfulness and his discretion, Lord Claude occupied the post of secretary to what might fairly be called the most exalted club in Europe. A young man, barely turned thirty, after a brilliant career at Oxford, he had declined the honors that might legitimately have been his, and had chosen instead to wander from court to court among the highways of Europe. Wherever he went he made friends. He was one of those silent Treshams who have played and still play so large a part behind the noisy politicians in whose control the destinies of Europe are supposed to lie. At present, however, he was engaged in a wider sphere of operations than the field of English politics allowed. He was secretary to what was nicknamed among its exalted members the "Black Cabinet"—more familiarly, the "Blacks."

Rumor ascribed to the aged emperor of Austria, Franz Joseph, the formulation of this unique conception of a club of reigning monarchs. Certainly the proposition, whoever had propounded it, was taken up with alacrity. In these days of democracy kings must preserve the dignities of their order, even if it necessitates the formation of a royal trades union. What more fitting, then, than that the club should be inaugurated in Paris, where kings and emperors love to spend their holidays far from the cares of state and pomp of power?

Most of the ruling sovereigns, and not a few prospective or deposed ones, were members of the club, but not all were of the first order. The "Blacks," in fact, comprised a limited number of the graver rulers, who were pledged to diverse things, but mainly to stand by one another and discontinue the spread of republican doctrines, to preserve the peace of Europe, and to act together in case that peace were menaced by the ambitions of the smaller, restless kings. The club was theoretically always in session, though it had no fixed meeting place. Lord Claude Tresham was traveling secretary, and carried the minutes of the meetings under his hat. The leaders of the "Blacks" were: Franz Joseph of Austria, Gustav of Sweden, George of England, Victor of Italy, George of Greece, Charles of Roumania and Haakon of Norway. "Outside" members, who were looked on with a certain suspicion, on account of their spirit of adventure and recklessness, though they were nominally of the club, were the czar, the kaiser and Ferdinand of Bulgaria.

Given the black, the red must be created if it does not exist. The "Reds" were not members, but it was understood that they, too, were pledged to support each other in their various schemes. They comprised Alfonso of Spain, ex-King Manuel of Portugal, Peter of Serbia, Nicholas of Montenegro and a number of leading statesmen, pledged in the main to overthrow democracy and the constitutional monarchies and to revive the spirit of absolutism in Europe. By their support of Polish ambitions, they might have numbered the wavering czar Nicholas among their members. They were represented in western Europe by Jean Rosny of Paris, and it was to him that Paul Lane, American millionaire and would-be adventurer of fortune, made his reports.

The successful issue of his Moroccan mission had given Paul the hope that admission to the secret councils of the "Reds" might be his, that the mysterious woman whose urging had induced him to devote himself and his fortunes to the League of Lost Causes would again be by him, would reveal her identity and let him plead his love. That she was in high rank among the ancient families of Europe he was aware, that she scorned him as a mere moneyed American he suspected. But the memory of her burned in his heart like an inextinguishable fire, and the impossibility of even gaining audience with her embittered him. In his despondency he broached the subject to Jean Rosny.

The latter looked at him quizzically.

"Paul, you are impatient," he said. "Tell me one thing: do you ally yourself with us in the hope of gaining your lady's affections, or out of sympathy with our cause?"

"It was because I believed in the cause," said Paul soberly. "But," he added naively, "undoubtedly it is the charming personality of Mademoiselle—"

"Yes, of Mademoiselle," answered Rosny dryly.

"Let us call her that, then," Paul Lane responded. "It was that which had a leading influence upon my decision. Rosny, my money is indispensable to the league. You have admitted as much to me. Then why—"

"Why should you be debarred from meeting Mademoiselle again? Why, is it not enough, Paul, to know that she watches you, that she approves of your work, to feel that some day your work will assure her again? My dear Paul, trust yourself to us, with the knowledge that by each success you hasten the day when all that you desire will be revealed to you, and when you will be admitted into the inner circles of the league. Now listen well, my friend. We have need of you again."

And he unrolled the plan which brought about this situation; that, while Lord Tresham gave to Monsieur Gabriel, the restaurant keeper, his last instructions as to the menu for a certain banquet, Paul, in the guise of a waiter, stood patiently by, napkin in hand, and a very clean white tie reposing on an immaculate, stiff shirt front.

There were six places at the table and five men, four of them kings, waited gravely for the last to arrive. They had shaken off the garb that is so contagious in Paris, for the occasion was a momentous one. If he should not arrive—

"I know he will not come," said the Greek sovereign, playing with his beard. "He could not hope to escape recognition with those confounded Yankee journalists tagging him every where that he goes."

"I think he will come," said Haakon. "Did you ever know him to refuse an opportunity for such an adventure?"

"Yes, he'll come," answered Lord Claude. "Unfortunately—because—"

The door opened and Monsieur Gabriel bowed to the floor like a fawn of the Annunciation. And close behind him strode a tall, king-like figure, clad in a voluminous robe, which he threw into Monsieur Gabriel's arms, disclosing the personality of the kaiser himself.

His four brother sovereigns rose simultaneously and embraced him. Lord Claude bowed over his hand, and Wilhelm, seating himself at the vacant place, called loudly for wine. At the same moment two pretty waitresses appeared from behind a curtain, bearing the soup tureen and dishes, while Paul, as head waiter, loomed up important in the background. And so the dinner began.

They joked and chaffed with one another throughout the meal, the kaiser's presence lending an atmosphere of supreme good-fellowship to the proceedings. Lord Claude, impassive and inscrutable as he was, unbent at the kaiser's charming raillery. The meal was nearly ended before Haakon remembered something.

"By the way, Tresham," he said, "why did you remark that his majesty would come 'unfortunately'? That was the very word, I believe. Come, speak up and tell us."

"That," answered Tresham, "will form part of the subsequent proceedings of the club. The meeting," he added, looking at his watch, "will not begin till nine. It is now twenty minutes short of the hour."

The cloth was removed, walnuts were placed beside the port, in accordance with Monsieur Gabriel's immemorial custom, and the guests relaxed themselves in their chairs. The clock struck nine. Monsieur Gabriel, bowing low, dismissed himself to a chorus of compliments.

"Go now, mademoiselles," he said to the pretty waitresses. "Go, monsieur," he added to Paul. The latter moved with the girls toward the exit behind the curtain. His mission was in the making—ten minutes more and—

Then Lord Claude Tresham stood up in his chair.

"One moment, please," he said. "Monsieur Gabriel, where did you get these ladies?"

"These ladies, monsieur, as you are pleased to call them, are experienced waitresses and highly recommended," answered the proprietor, smiling. "Mademoiselle Armine, here, served with the family of the Duc de Berry for three years. Mademoiselle Nanette grew up, as I may say, with the family of the Duc de Nemours. Her references are irreproachable."

"Enough," said Tresham. "You and Mademoiselle Armine may retire through the door. Mademoiselle Nanette remains; she wishes to speak with us."

"Gentlemen," he said, "you have wished to know why I referred to the visit of his majesty, the German emperor, as 'unfortunate.' We need have no secrets here. Our cards are all on the table. Your majesties, permit me to present Miss Nancy Shand."

The rulers inclined their heads gravely. "A friend of yours, Lord Tresham?" inquired the Greek sovereign blandly.

"No," answered Lord Claude curtly. "One of your confounded Yankee journalists, and the cleverest in Europe at the present day."

"The devil!" shouted the Greek king, springing up in his chair and then collapsing with an apologetic air. "Well, the fat's in the fire now," he muttered.

"Miss Shand," said Lord Tresham, addressing the very composed young lady, "you are here tonight because, by a stroke of good fortune, you have learned of the existence and meeting of our club."

"You are well aware of what I discovered an hour before the dinner, that a conspiracy has been formed against his majesty, the kaiser, in the interests of two gentlemen—his majesty, King Peter of Serbia and his highness, Prince Nicholas of Montenegro. Am I correct?"

"I am at liberty to give out advance information," Miss Nancy answered.

"But since you know more than I, Miss Shand—or else you would not have been here—I will be frank with you. King Peter and Prince Nicholas have resolved to make a sudden attack on Turkey—pray, sir, be seated and have patience for a moment. They learned that his majesty, the German emperor, intended to visit France. They planned to detain him here for four and twenty hours, confident that, in his absence, none would have courage enough to veto their intentions. And, once the war had begun, all Europe would be aflame, and they would pull some fine plums out of the pudding."

"All this was unknown to me," said Miss Shand demurely. "But it will make excellent material for the Globe-Mercury. All I knew, Lord Tresham, was that some gentlemen of royal blood were dining here tonight. Will you not tell me now—"

Suddenly the door was burst open and Monsieur Gabriel appeared, threshold, hand with four. "Gentlemen, your majesties—" he stammered; and then Lord Claude took in the situation. He ran toward the door, followed by the rest. They were too late. Advancing toward them came a file of six infantrymen, headed by a young lieutenant, who stopped six paces distant and motioned them back.

"Gentlemen," he said, "you are under arrest on the charge of conspiring against the French republic. You must come with me at once. Shall I read the warrant?"

The sovereigns looked at one another aghast. Arrest in Paris was no joke, even though the charges must fall and their release be effected immediately after they had reached the station house and held a confidential discussion with the sergeant in charge. But the kaiser—the kaiser, arrested in Paris!

But the monarch's dismay was fully equaled by that of Paul, who, still attired in waiter's garb, lingered by the curtain. So far he had fulfilled his instructions admirably. It was necessary, as Lord Tresham had said, that the kaiser should be detained in France, while Peter and Nicholas of Montenegro carried out their schemes of aggrandizement. With this object in view he had arranged for the kidnapping of the distinguished guests and their temporary transference to a chateau in the vicinity of the French capital by a body of men selected from among the members of the league to raid the club under the guise of policemen and arrest the members as anarchists. But through some inscrutable leakage the commandant of Paris had got wind of part of the affair and, believing that the police were about to arrest a notorious band of criminals, had resolved to anticipate them and obtain the credit for the army. The document was equally calamitous for both parties.

Paul sized up the situation before Tresham could put his wits together. The kings still clustered at the entrance to the dining-room; the officer was still fumbling with his papers. He sprang from behind the curtain and seized the kaiser by the arm, dashed back with him into the dining-room and ran to a sliding panel behind the big fireplace, a remnant of the stirring days of the thirties, when the last Bourbon reigned on his uneasy throne and conspiracy was rife in Paris. He pushed it back, disclosing a narrow flight of stairs.

At the head he hesitated. The woman journalist, who, all unsuspected by him, had also been present at the banquet—if she escaped she would reveal the story as Lord Tresham had told it to her, and his efforts would be useless. He must make her a captive as well as his majesty. And as he turned he uttered an exclamation of surprise, for there stood she beside them, her eyes alight with eagerness, and the great "story" of the year half written in her brain. Miss Nancy Shand was always on the spot when news was in the making.

Motioning to both to precede him, Paul pulled back the sliding panel into position just as the lieutenant, becoming aware of the flight of some members of the party, dashed into the dining-room—to see only the furniture and the walls.

Black darkness confronted them, but Paul had learned of way before that night. He urged his charges down the narrow stairs until they found themselves, at a turn of the path, in a large, dimly-lit chamber of stone, with a stone door. Round this apartment were ranged enormous tuns, in which Monsieur Gabriel stored his choice Burgundy from the Midi. Paul closed the door behind him—it had no key. Then he turned on his guests.

"Your majesty," he said, "I owe you a thousand apologies. But I can save you. There is only one way out of your dilemma, and not a dignified one. Still—"

He walked toward the nearest wine tun and turned the spigot, and a rich crimson flood began to stain the stone of the floor. The next was empty, and the next also. Drawing himself backward, he shot his fist with all his might. The blow shattered the head of the tun into two pieces. Another blow did likewise to the second tun. Paul Lane removed the heads and returned, rubbing his injured knuckles.

"Sir," he said, "there is but one thing to be done. You must conceal yourself awhile from your enemies." The kaiser looked at the tun despairingly.

"You mean that I must creep in there?" he asked.

"There is no alternative, sir, unless you wish to surrender your person to your enemies."

"But the police!" the kaiser shouted. "The soldiers! Can such an outrage be perpetrated in the heart of Paris?"

"No, sir," said Paul. "It would mean only a temporary detention. But every hour's delay is likely to be fatal to "Spare me—spare my life!" he pleaded. "To the devil with your miserable life! Where is Bulghit, the leader of the dynamiters?" cried the officer.

"I do not know, monsieur," Paul whined. "They threatened me and I ran away through the secret panel. Ah, he was terrible, that brigand Bulghit; his very mustaches seemed to bristle."

From somewhere, very far away, the very faintest knocking came, and the faintest of cries. Paul Lane seized the lieutenant by the arm.

"They must be above, in the flooring," he cried. "Ah, that loose plank that squeaked. I will get them, monsieur, I will—"

"Come on, men!" shouted the officer, and darted out of the cellar and up the stairs. Paul followed leisurely.

Thus it came about that their majesties of Sweden, Norway, Greece and Roumania made their appearance in the central police station of Paris. And in a short while they were released with the most abject apologies. The secret was kept, for, by a miracle of luck, there were no reporters present.

But when the news was telegraphed in several ciphers to the capitals of Europe that same night and no word came of the kaiser, it is reported that Bothmann-Holweg tore his hair and drafted a dozen different letters of resignation. Meanwhile Serbia and Montenegro despatched an ultimatum to Constantinople to demand certain advantages, and there was none to reb-

Paul thrust Monsieur Gabriel from him and rushed out into the street. He hailed a passing fiacre and ordered the man to drive to the terminal station of the Southern railway. Arrived there, he tossed the man a louis and rushed into the freight yard. There were thousands of tuns, piled up, rolled into heaps which every now and then collapsed, like topheavy pyramids, and tumbled over other tuns, sending dozens of them skipping and rolling in every direction. And at each gate wagons and vans were discharging tuns and barrels of every sort and size. Paul stared in dismay at this fearful panorama. Among those thousands, which tun held Germany's ruler and which the woman spy? He could never find either. He pictured the kaiser, slightly perishing in that dreadful receptacle, rolled into vans, shifted and shunted, passing from the main track to little branch railways, at last to find a resting place in some French peasant's home, where his body would be disclosed to a startled, gasping multitude. A dead man in a tun! A mystery for five days! Then—nothing! He would be interred in some little graveyard and the secret of Germany's lost ruler would never be revealed!

He staggered like a drunken man around the yards. At the gates porters were joking and chatting with drivers as the hideous tuns were unloaded and sent crashing upon the tops of others. From their battered sides this mass of what seemed like ground like blood. Which one? Dear God, which one?

Distracting images crowded Paul's brain. He thought of Richard of the Lion Heart and of his faithful troubadour who sought him in his imprisonment from castle to castle through the length and breadth of Europe, until at last, singing the "Chanson de Roland" beneath the castle walls, he heard Richard's response within. But there was neither castle nor song—only these hideous tuns.

Stay! There was a song. For had not his Majesty composed a famous song, the "Song to Aegir," which had been satirized and ridiculed and admired throughout all Germany and Europe, too?

Paul Lane began to hum that song. He trod the outskirts of the barrels and began humming, hopelessly, but doggedly humming. Then he sang louder. Presently he was chanting loudly. A porter turned and jeered at him as he closed his gate. The man was drunk. He fished wine from the nearly empty barrels and, impudently drunk, he slugged Paul in the face. "You can wait there till morning, if you want to!" he yelled at him. Paul went on singing.

Presently, as he threaded his way among the maze of tuns, it occurred to him that the barrels from Gabriel's having been collected only recently, would of necessity be on the outskirts nearest the gates. This thought gave him new hope. He picked his way thither and began singing again. And at last, just as he had abandoned hope, he heard the faintest answer.

He stopped, hardly daring to hope. He sang loudly. Now he could distinguish the tun from which the voice proceeded. He listened; it was the answer. It was the "Song to Aegir," and sung under circumstances such as its royal composer had never in his wildest dreams imagined.

Paul went toward that end of the barrel where he knew the Kaiser's feet must be. He swung his arm back and his fist forward. An instant later he was helping Germany's ruler out of his hiding place.

And both gasped: "The woman!"

The second barrel must lie near the first. Paul had lifted and tested them. Light—light—light—ha! this one must hold all that was left of her. Again he swung his fist and the barrel head burst asunder. And out of it scrambled, very flushed and indignant and hopelessly in disarray, Miss Nancy Shand.

"You are alive," gasped Paul. "But how—how did you breathe? I thought I corked the bung-hole."

"Idiot!" sobbed Miss Nancy, "didn't you ever hear of a hairpin?"

That is how Germany got back her sovereign in time to stay the war. They say Prince Nicholas received his kingdom in place of his prince-don, for staying his hand. That is disputed, but it is certain that Paul Lane possesses the Order of the Black Eagle.

GRACEFUL IN SERGE GERMS CARRIED BY TONGUE

SMART COSTUME THAT HAS CHARM ALL ITS OWN.

For Durability, Style and Smartness It is Doubtful if Any Material Can Be Made to Rival This Popular Material.

Not all the graceful frocks this fall are built of silk and satin, though it must be admitted they are generally first choice. More than occasionally, however, one comes across distinctly smart costumes in prosaic serge, and who can deny its charm?

Blue serge, which is always in style, is a craze this year. The woman who has not been made happy in the possession of one gown of it is an exception. We all know of its durability, style and smartness. Still, with all its popularity, it does not appear in the least common nor in any sense a uniform, as would certainly be the case were the color any other than navy.

A sensible and not over elaborate dress design for fall street wear or traveling is sketched for today, and is developed in blue serge. There is a wide armhole blouse, with long sleeves cut in one, and with front edges that cross over each other, buttoning with a line of small magenta ball buttons and loops.

The back of the blouse is very slightly gathered to the shallow yoke, starting at the shoulder seams and covering the entire shoulder breadth. The y-neck has a fold of embroidered crepe done in blue and magenta set along the edges to give the effect of a tiny vest. Then there is a rolling collar and a small tucker of white crepe. The knitted silk tie and crushed girdle can either be of black or magenta.

The skirt has an interesting tunic made to open on the left side in a line with the waist opening. It buttons along the edge near the end of the overlapping corner, with more ball buttons and loops. The lower line of this tunic slopes away from the center front.

When Hubby Takes Outing. He Will Surely Appreciate It if His Comfort Is Looked After Before He Starts.

If the autumn outing of the husband, father or brother is to be made thoroughly delightful, he must be provided with all the new contrivances. If he is a confirmed golfer, see to it that he has a long, flat trunk to hold his golf sticks and a caddy bag of duck reinforced with leather.

Is he a fisherman? Then his fishing basket must be the wicker harpoon with leather and provided with a wide sling strap that goes across the chest. But don't forget that he needs a tackle box in leather with compartments in both base and lid for fishing accessories, as well as a morocco case containing a complete repairing kit—rotary screwdriver, hook file, nippers, pliers, tweezers, punch, wrapping linen, cement, wax, emery cloth, polishing paper and drop oil can.

The hunter needs an unbreakable lunch outfit in a leather case; a luminous compass dial with a floating bar needle, in an oxidized case, and a leather bracelet fitted with a water-tight lid, silver-encased watch.

TO BE STRICTLY IN FASHION These Little Items Must Be Kept in Mind and Most Faithfully Adhered To.

Tassels are coming in for a great deal of attention. They are to be seen in all colors and in a variety of styles. Cigaroons, too, will be worn a great deal.

Stamped velvet is one of the new materials which bespeak the extravagance of the day in the matter of dress materials. It will be used not only for trimming but for entire gowns or wraps.

Some of the most gorgeous brocades are those of the metallic shades on a solid background of brilliant coloring. The beautiful haptins now worn serve not only as a fastening for the hat but give a decided touch of trimming to the hat as well. The pins with tops of cut jet are most artistic.

Cut jet earrings will be in evidence more than ever for street wear. The long, slender pendant in the favorite Crepe ribbon in the Bulgarian effects come in various widths. They are used for collars, trimmings, sashes and girdles, and also for bandings on gowns or wraps.

The newest draped skirts are raised short in front and widen in folds toward the hips.

Among new fabrics are many brocades, laines, garnished with sequins and gold or silver lace.

Evening girdles are to be wide and draped, and will be worn both below and above the waistline. This year's wedding gowns should be fashioned of plain or broadened satin, crepe de chine or charmeuse. They

One of the Most Perfect Combs Yet Made Teeth Is Not Generally Understood.

How many, or rather how few women know that the tongue carries germs as great as the teeth. Foreign particles frequently adhere to the rough or upper side of the tongue, and beside it is often coated with what is called "dental fur." This fur is a yellowish white substance and is found on the teeth and tongue of every one who does not clean his or her teeth and mouth at least twice a day. This deposit usually forms so quickly that even the most fastidious have sometimes to be careful lest it settle on the teeth.

If the teeth cannot be brushed frequently during the day, then it is advisable to brush them the last thing before retiring at night. These two acts alone, if the teeth and mouth and tongue are properly cleansed, will do much toward preserving the teeth.

So many women brush the teeth in a haphazard fashion. They brush vigorously enough, but they are not particular enough to see that the brushing is carried on properly. The brush is wet and then sprinkled with powder, the teeth get a quick brushing on the outer surface, very little attention given to the inside, and usually the brushing consists of the crosswise stroke. Of course this is a little better than nothing, as it removes surface accumulations, and not always that.

FOR HEALTH AND BEAUTY Matter of Diet Is Highly Important, If One Would Acquire and Preserve Good Looks.

All of the fresh fruits add their quota of usefulness to the diet, and eaten plentifully will help to keep you well and pretty. There is a legend that one famous French beauty lived exclusively on oranges, but common sense tells us that she occasionally slipped in a meal of things more substantial. The thin girl will do well to eat largely of raisins, for they contain a rich proportion of sugars that are so fattening. Train yourself to eat a variety of foods. Many a girl with a bad complexion owes it to the fact that she grew up with the foolish habit of eating only a few favorite dishes. The different fruits and vegetables contain a variety of salts, all valuable to the body, and the natural appetite demands a change, even from the best and most nutritious fare. Eat generously of the fruits and vegetables the season allows, but—just one word of caution—see to it that they are fresh. A single helping of tomatoes that have begun to spoil, a bit of dessert made of overripe or stale berries, a glass of milk that has been exposed to the summer dust, any of these things may give rise to one of those little complaints known as "summer complaint."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Upturned Hems. The innovation in upturned hems on the outside of the skirt has given the colorists another chance to put in a dash of tone that will contrast with the rest of the skirt. As Roman stripes and Scotch plaids continue to reappear, on the best of the new clothes, it is only natural that they should find an upturning place at the bottom of the skirt or at the edge of one of those wired tunics that are made of all kinds of thin material.

There is a dark-blue coat suit of gabardine which has a two-inch hem of red, white and blue plaid bound with a black velvet ribbon at the top; the coat does not have a collar of the plaid which is the first thing one thinks of its having, but the Scotch silk shows up as envelope flaps to the three pockets, which are edged with a black velvet ribbon and fastened over a black velvet button.

Divided Satin-Stitch. If a leaf or scroll is too wide to be worked in satin-stitch, it may be divided on the center line and worked in two sections. If a leaf is veined, lay the padding in two sections.

Monograms. French knots make a very handsome monogram, especially in old English. No padding is required, and the paper-mache letters cannot be used. Stamp the monogram upon the article, and then simply fill it in closely and solidly with small French knots. The result will be highly satisfactory.

An exchange says that a man passed through Kansas recently with the following inscription on his wagon: "Colorado and elevation, Kansas and stagnation, populistic administration and damnation. I'm going to my wife's relations and make no further demonstrations." Another exchange suggests: "Come to Wisconsin, correct in elevation, where a man with an education can engage in speculation, bring along your wife's relations, have good times and free salvation, and no danger of starvation. This is worth consideration."

Marquette Eagle-Star, Rep., says: "Well, it's all right to lay the blame on the Democrats, but the national Democratic administration has not hurt things at all. The trouble on the coast is not due to the Democrats either. The western coast has simply been overdone and the natural result has come. Wisconsin and other states with cheap, good lands where any industrious man can make a good living are benefiting now by this 'showing up' of the west and will continue to benefit."

James Garret of Milladore was a pleasant caller in this office on Saturday. Mr. Garret returned on Thursday from a three weeks visit with his son at Bonner's Ferry, Idaho, where he has charge of the shipping department for the Bonner's Ferry Lumber Co., a concern that manufactures 600,000 feet of lumber a year. Mr. Garret also visited with his daughter, Mrs. A. A. Allen at Foster City, Idaho. He reports things quite lively in the west, excepting the lumber industry.

Hardly a day passes that some person does not come to the printing office to have some current article they have with their neighbor stirred in the columns of the paper. Of course the editor never does it, but still they keep right on trying. The editor of a newspaper does not care particularly about neighborhood quarrels, and if he did it would not be a very nice thing to tell all of his readers about it. Our advice to readers of the Tribune is for people to settle their quarrels among themselves and not run to the paper as soon as they happen to have a disagreement. It will always work out better in the end.

It is rather severe on a mother-in-law, but nevertheless they tell this story on an Irishman who had gone to town to buy something to be worn as a mark of mourning. Going into a gent's furnishing store he told the clerk he was mourning for mourning wearing, but not knowing exactly what to get, asked the clerk what was best. "It depends," said the salesman, "on how near a relative you wish to show this mark of respect. For a near relative you should have an all black suit. For some one not so near, a broad band of black on the left arm is sufficient or a somewhat narrower one for some one more distant." "That being the case," said the Irishman, "give me a shoe string. It's my wife's mother—Marshfield Herald.

A dispatch from Madison says that Chas. E. Hinget, proprietor of the Hotel Hinget of Marshfield, has had a suit started against him by Attorney General Owen for violating the child labor law. It is claimed that he worked two girls under 16 years of age in his hotel without having a permit.

The entire brick pavement on the east side is now open to the public and it is safe that the public appreciates the change from the old state of affairs. It is safe to say that nicely paved streets do more to impress the visitor with the neatness of a town than any one thing that can be done to it.

Attorney Geo. P. Hambrecht last week received notice of his appointment as a member of the University board of visitors under the new law. While the appointment is mostly an honorary one it is evidence that we are still on the map and that Grand Rapids is thought of when they commence to look for a man that is right.

The fire department was called out on Saturday afternoon by a small blaze in the rear of the Mint saloon. A gasoline stove that is used for preparing lunches caught fire and had not been discovered as soon as it was it is entirely probable that there would have been a serious conflagration. L. D. Carl, the man who was confined in the county jail charged with embezzling the electric light funds at Marshfield, left for that city on Wednesday soon after obtaining bail. Mr. Carl made the statement that there had been no embezzlement of the funds as charged, and that if the matter were thoroughly investigated he would be found to be guiltless in the matter. According to his statement it is all a mistake, and he says that if there any shortage discovered that he will make it good himself.

The Dance of Yesteryear.

Slide your partner, let her go; Balance all and do it so; Swing your girl and run away; Right and left on; cents sashay; Gents to right, and sving or cheat; On to next girl an' repeat. Balance next an' don't be shy; Swing your pard an' swing 'er high; Bunch the girls and circle 'round; Whack 'em feet until they bound; Alaman left an' balance all; Lift your heels an' let 'em fall; Back to partner, do it so; All join hands an' off you go. And this is the style of call-off in vogue these days.

Salute your partner, grab her there; Snap your fingers. It's a bear; Glide an' then your shoulders shag; Do the willowy bunny hug; Write and wiggle, round the hall; Hold her tight. Don't let her fall; Sinewy snake movements now. Be as graceful as a cow. Swing around one little spot, Break off in the turkey trot; Now the tango. Come, be quick; Show high you two can kick. Twist and turn and squirm and sway. That's what's termed a dance to-day. —Ex.

SHEBOYGAN READY FOR CONVENTION

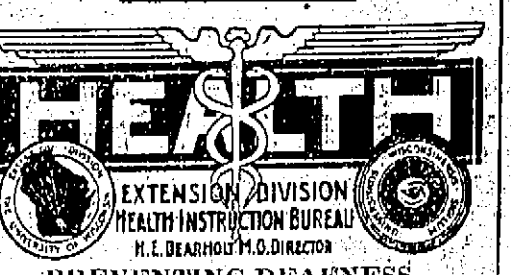

Sheboygan is all ready for Wisconsin's Fifty-third State Sunday School Convention, which will meet there Nov. 14-15. The splendid Opera House and five of the churches will be used for the various sessions. Every Sunday School worker in the state should attend the convention.

A School of Methods covering every department of Sunday School activity will be conducted by a faculty of specialists of wide reputation.

This convention will show a marked development in Sunday School work in the state, and also in the work of the Wisconsin Sunday School Association.

The Association now employs for the benefit of all Sunday School workers the state three field workers, Mr. F. H. Brigham, who came to the General Secretaryship of the Association a year and a half ago from a successful pastorate at Wausau; Miss Mabel L. Bailey, Elementary Specialist, of Missouri, who has already made a large place for herself in the Sunday School work of the state, and is constantly giving practical assistance to multitudes of workers with children.

Mr. R. C. Mackenzie has recently been added to the force of the State Association, coming from Columbus, Ohio, where he has been actively successful in Public Recreation work. Boy Scout and Y. M. C. A. work. He is making a specialty of Sunday School and general welfare work among those of the Teen Age.

Last week, "Colds" an ather treatment and prevention were discussed in this column. In the minds of physicians, as well as in the heads of patients, the cure has been closely associated with the nose and throat. Ordinary colds commonly deaden the sense of hearing temporarily. This transient deafness is important only as it signifies how many cases of permanent deafness result from blowing the nose improperly. According to a prominent Milwaukee specialist in diseases of the ear, a very large percentage of deafness is caused by permanent stretching of the ear drum.

As was said last week, the internal ear apparatus is connected with the nose by an air passage, which passage is cut off the Eustachian Tube. The purpose of this connection is to keep an even pressure upon both sides of the ear drum.

Everyone has probably been conscious of more or less temporary deafness after vigorous blowing of the nose, particularly when the nostrils are "stuffed up." This temporary deafness is due to plugging of the Eustachian Tube at its point of opening into the nasal passages with temporary ballooning of the ear drum.

A rubber band will lose its elasticity if repeatedly stretched beyond its normal limits. Just so will the ear drum. The ear drum which loses its elasticity will obviously be incapable of those fine, small vibrations upon which hearing is dependent. In blowing the nose, one should be exceedingly careful to avoid closing the nostrils and particularly to avoid the explosive method that one occasionally sees and hears.

Married.
Friendship Press.—The home of Mr. and Mrs. R. F. Moshure of North Quincy, was the scene of a pretty double wedding on October 22nd, when their daughters, Josephine, who is married in marriage with Leo B. Powers, and Eleanor with John Hovorka.

The first couple were attended by Miss Ruth Moshure, and the last couple by Miss Nina Moshure of Grand Rapids, and Henry Hovorka of Friendship, Rev. B. E. Day officiating.

The contracting parties to these weddings are prominent and well known young people, and all have a wide circle of friends and acquaintances, who will join with us in extending congratulations and best wishes. They will make their future homes on farms in the town of Quincy.

How They Skinned Us.

All kinds and sizes of false weights and measures are exhibited in the assembly chamber at Madison as a feature of the meeting of state weights and measures officials. These "frauds" have been confiscated from dealers all over the state and show to what an extent people of Wisconsin have been imposed upon.

The exhibit includes measures with false bottoms, sliding front scales and invertible berry boxes.

CLEASBY PLEADS FOR BETTER PROTECTION OF WILD FOWL

Here are some reasons why the wood duck and woodcock should be given a five year closed season. The prairie chicken also needs a five year rest from the ruthless gunner.

The wood duck is the most beautiful bird of this or any other continent, outside possibly of the mandarin duck of China. There never was or ought to be a time when it is right to kill this most beautiful of nature's gifts for the sole purpose of eating it. This bird has a right to live, if any bird has a right to live because of its beauty, in order to beautify our woods and waters and make outdoor life more interesting. I appeal to the aesthetic sense of sensible Americans everywhere in behalf of this bird.

From this time henceforth, barbarians and game-hogs can find in their stomachs a desire of slaughter of this bird in order to strip off its plumage and eat it. Any man who can kill a wood duck for food can not be trusted to refrain from destroying Mr. Kelly's "Immaculate Conception" in order to boil his potatoes with its frame for fuel. The slaughter of the wood duck in order to fill the flesh pots of Mr. Chalm and his little Chims is too gross, and brutal to be tolerated in a civilized country.

The woodcock has been hunted long, it has been nearly exterminated. No less an authority than the United States department of agriculture has served a warning that this bird is nearly exterminated. One of the gamblers that ever decorated a covert and eagerly sought after by gunners needs at least a five year rest to save it from absolute extermination. It feeds on worms and other insects which it digs from the ground by the use of its long bill, and thus is of much value to agriculture.

Continued shooting of the pinnated quail means its final extermination. It may be true that in some counties where they are protected they may have increased, but the great numbers that decorated the state in 1865 are gone. Any person who doubts the extermination of the prairie chicken is certainly ignorant of the history of the extinction of the eastern prairie chicken. In some counties of Wisconsin the booming of the male bird that was so commonly heard formerly is silent, and the ruthless gunner is responsible. A bird that migrates from state to state is a migratory bird, and comes within the intent of the migratory bird law. Can we not live for five years at least without the flesh of prairie chicken? Is hunting of a nearly exterminated species sport?

I appeal to all true sportsmen, to all bird-lovers, to all organizations, teachers, and others that appreciate the beauties of nature, if you wish to save from extermination the above birds to write at once and state your views. I may not be able to answer your letters, but I shall certainly place them before the proper committee concerned in saving from extermination some of our best and most beautiful, as well as valuable bird life in this country.

E. A. CLEASBY.
Acting President of Wisconsin Audubon Society.

Got Big Damages.—In the United States court at St. Paul a jury recently returned a verdict of $20,000 in favor of William P. McMahon and against the Illinois Central Railway company. McMahon was a brakeman and at Amboy, Ill., he was run over by sixteen cars and a caboose, sustaining the loss of both arms and the other above the elbow. Both legs were also severely injured. Walter D. Corrigan, well known here, was one of the lawyers for the plaintiff. The trial lasted ten days.

Young Man Shot.—James Wolfe, a-lices on a far three miles from Junction twenty-two years of age, and who left City, was accidentally shot in his left arm Sunday morning and that afternoon was brought to St. Michael's hospital in this city for treatment. A charge of fine shot entered the fleshy part of the arm, tearing away much of the flesh from the elbow to a short distance above the wrist and from the palm of the hand. However, from present indications, amputation will not be necessary. Details of the accident are to the effect that young Wolfe and his father, George Wolfe, were hunting and that the son's shotgun was discharged when he was about to rest it on a stump.—Stevens' Point Journal.

"MRS. KELLEY" IS A NATIVE BADGER

By Lieut. Col. J. A. Watrous.

Milwaukee Sentinel.—I do not write to advertise Burton Holmes. Judging from the packed houses that have greeted him, he needs no advertising. As his audiences noted the unfolding of the almost miraculous achievements of the American government in the Philippines the past fifteen years they must have experienced great satisfaction at what their country had done for a benighted and oppressed people, and their love of country must have increased.

In the lecture of Thursday night Wisconsin people, whether that audience realized it or not, have a special reason for pride in the good work that Uncle Sam is doing in the Philippine Islands. One of the delightful features of the lecture appeared when Mr. Holmes began to talk about "Good morning, Mrs. Kelley." I wonder how many of that audience knew that Mrs. Kelley who had brought about such a wonderful transformation in the army of Igorote girls and young women, is a native of Wisconsin, and that for many years her home was at Grand Rapids, this state.

She was a Wisconsin teacher, having had schools in her own county and in the city of Merrill. She is the daughter of a Wisconsin man. Her father, Duncan McKay, is a member of Wisconsin consistory of Scottish Rite Masons. Soon after her marriage to Mr. Kelley in 1900 they went to Manila, Mrs. Kelley to teach and her husband as an expert mining engineer to look after mining interests.

Owing to the unsettled condition of affairs in the islands their plans were changed. They rented the house owned by the Spanish admiral who commanded the fleet which Dewey destroyed, and established a home for American officers and their families. That pleasant home, on San Sebastian street was one of the most popular places for Americans in Manila.

After remaining there nearly two years they went to the new town, just begun, of Benguet, which for years has been the summer headquarters for the Philippine government. There Mr. Kelley carried on his work as a mining expert. He had a part in opening one of the most successful gold mines in the islands. Mrs. Kelley gave her attention to teaching the Igorote girls. The school is known throughout the islands as "Mrs. Kelley's school," and one of the first things that the inhabitants of the provinces of Benguet and Bontoc learned to say was: "Good morning, Mrs. Kelley." Not hundreds but thousands and tens of thousands of people, whenever they addressed an American of any other white man or white woman who visited those provinces said, "Good morning, Mrs. Kelley."

Through the splendid management of this most worthy native of Wisconsin many thousands of those people now talk English distinctly and their achievements in all directions toward civilization have been remarkable, and on "Good morning, Mrs. Kelley" is justly entitled to much of the credit. The audience will recall the parade of a large number of Mrs. Kelley's girl students and that she brought up the rear of the column. There were men in that audience who recognized the talented lady and felt like applauding after she passed on after her brown faced army. One of them had found a most delightful home, with her family of American officers, in the far away Philippines early in the history of American occupation of Manila.

Without boasting, Wisconsin could claim to have had a very large part in the uplifting and advance in the Philippines. Mrs. Kelley's efforts have brought grand results. Certainly no one military man had so much to do with bringing about peace as the late Lieut. Gen. MacArthur, and he also had a large part in planting the splendid school system that has resulted in giving more than 1,000,000 of the natives an education in the English language, a school system that promises to reach every nook and corner of the islands and afford every one an opportunity to learn.

Imaginary Heart Trouble

"Do you have pains in the region of the heart? Does your heart thump? Its terrible pounding greatly alarms you? What is wrong? Do you believe these symptoms mean heart trouble? Organic diseases of the heart very seldom occasion much pain, but are stealthy and deadly. Nine-tenths of the pains supposed to be in the heart, are either in or caused by some derangement of the stomach. Often a dyspeptic imagines he has heart disease."

THANKSGIVING DAY

SET FOR NOV. 27TH

WASHINGTON—Thanksgiving day

has been set for Thursday, Nov. 27,

President Wilson has issued his proclamation.

It reads:

"The season is at hand in which it has been our long respected custom

as a people to turn in praise and

thanksgiving to Almighty God for His manifest mercies and blessings to us

as a nation. The year that has just passed has marked in a great degree

by manifestations of His gracious and beneficial providence.

"We have not only had peace through our own borders and with the nations of the world, but that peace has been brightened by constantly multiplying

evidences of genuine friendship

of mutual sympathy and understanding

and of the happy operation of many elevating influences both of ideal and of practice.

"The nation has not only been prosperous, but it has proved its capacity to take calm counsel amidst the rapid movement of affairs and deal with its own life in a spirit of candor, righteousness and comity. We have seen the practical completion of a great work at the isthmus of Panama which exemplifies the nation's abundant resources to accomplish what it will

and the distinguished skill and capacity

of its public servants, but also promises

the beginning of a new age, of new contrasts, new neighborhoods, new sympathies, new bonds and new achievements of co-operation and peace.

"Righteousness exalteth the nation and 'peace on earth, good will toward men' furnish the only foundations upon which can be built the lasting achievements of the human spirit. The year has brought us the satisfaction of work well done and fresh visions of our duty, which will make the work of the future better still.

Now, therefore, I, Woodrow Wilson

President of the United States of America,

do hereby designate Thursday,

the 27th day of November, next,

as a day of thanksgiving and prayer,

and invite the people throughout the land to cease from their wonted occupations and in their several homes

and places of worship render thanks to Almighty God."

THEY KNOW THE ISSUE.

The hopes and aspirations of two hundred thousand voters in this state,

who stand ready and anxious to vote

the Democratic ticket in 1914 must not be chilled, by the Democracy of the state, with any presentation of issue

candidates, "has been," or "also ran,"

specimens, or by the intrusion of self-asserted leaders or barnacles into the program. The Democratic party of today, in Wisconsin, will not recognize or bow to any such exhortations or demands.

The principal issue is the outrageous extravagance of the McGovern administration and legislature. They are to be cleaned out and the entire population of the state understands this. Appropriations aggregating $3,000,000

smash party lines and obliterate partianship.

No fine Italian hand is needed to direct the forces and it will require

but a meagre amount of money to conduct the campaign. If discredited or undervictorious men are given important government appointments to the exclusion of worthy, capable Democrats,

who have devoted much of their lifetime to the preachment of Democracy,

party inaction in Wisconsin will ensue, and so it ought.

Directly the Baltimore convention

declared for a change in party administration and President Wilson is enabled to that support, in the administration of the government, which capable Democratic officials, in all the offices, everywhere, can give to him—

renewed enterprise.

Fulfilling His Promises.

Each Time, progressive republicanism. During the campaign the president promised the people if they elected him as their chief magistrate he would exert every available means at his command, in an effort to have the tariff revised and a new currency law,

one in his judgment fair to the big

and little banker and the people who make the possible. So far his word has not been discredited by any act of his and should the president fail in his purpose

to alter the currency law it could not be said that he failed to utilize every available resource in his effort to bring about the alteration promised the people prior to his election.

Income Tax Deferred.

It has become a habit on the part of those who have wealth to object to paying taxes. It is not surprising to hear walls from the districts in which the income tax would produce

most revenue. Those who complain seem of the opinion that the cost of running the government should be assessed on a per capita basis and every one should be called upon to contribute the same amount regardless of ability to pay and benefits received.

If the theory upon which the income tax has been drawn is that "wealth is a crime and should be punished," it is no new thing. There it must be a crime, to own real estate and have household goods. We have seen how the possessors of those things have years.—St. Paul Pioneer Press.

Forest Notes.

The national forests of Chile cover

about 7,000,000 acres.

The forest service of India has demonstrated that teakwood grown in plantations is just as strong as that grown in natural forests.

Even the well protected forests of Germany are by no means immune

from fire, and the Russian fire protection system makes use of lookout

towers and telephones.

PEDIGREED GRAIN

IS NOW AVAILABLE

A recent change made by the last legislature, with reference to the handling of receipts from crops grown on the Experimental Farms, does it desirable to feed as much of the grains

and forage grown on the farm as is possible, thus lessening the outlay for feeding stuffs in maintaining the herds and flocks on the farm. But, as only pure bred standard grains are grown

the work of the branch experiment stations can be made effective to a much higher degree if these pure

grains are available for dissemination purposes to farmers and others interested in getting better producing grains, as well as a line of higher feed

value; and this, of course, was the intent of the legislature. With this in view, the Dean of the College of Agriculture has seen it to recommend a system of exchanges by which any farmer who wishes to secure such grains may do so by exchanging grains

on the basis of equal money value. It will, however, not be possible nor necessary to return same kind of grains

asked for. The following exchanges are illustrations of what may be done

—oats may be exchanged for oats, or for wheat, or for flax. Aside from oats exchanges for same kind of grains is not desirable.

Farmers who live within easy hauling distance may come directly to the farm, while others residing at a distance may have shipments made by freight on the same basis except that freight charges both ways are to be paid by the farmer. In either case,

however, written or oral notice should be sent to the station in advance so that the quantities ordered may be reserved. Orders will be booked in the order that they are received, and

first come will be first served.

This exchange privilege applies to the following grains which are now

on hand:

Pedigreed Winter Wheat,

Blue Ribbon Spring Wheat,

Knott's Patent No. 52 Resistant Flax,

Medium Red Clover,

Seed corn consisting mainly of Wisconsin No. 8, Yellow Dent is preferably disposed of on a cash basis, yet

exchange for other grains is permissible to a limited extent. Where for some reason any farmer prefers to purchase outright any seed grains, he may do so. The prices will be reasonable, provided the purchase is made by bona fide farmers for use on their own farms. A considerable amount of

No. 8 Pedigreed Oats and Dent corn

were grown this year, and only small amounts of the other crops. Orders should be sent in early to insure getting what is wanted.

All correspondence should be ad-

ressed to Marshfield Experiment Station, Marshfield, Wisconsin.

THE GREAT VALUE OF

HUMUS IN THE SOIL.

The necessity for more humus in average soils has long been understood by advance thinkers along agricultural lines. The Wisconsin Advancement association has made this matter an important part of its program, and long before the organization's present manager urged it as a means of producing larger crops.

Recently the Minnesota Experimental station has made some tests,

proving that soils with 5 per cent of humus held 20 per cent more water

than that which had 2 per cent of humus. This often means the difference between a large crop and a small one—sometimes the difference between a large crop and failure.

The experiment station went further and showed that with 5 per cent of humus from three to four times as much phosphorus was available than where there was but 2 per cent of humus.

Here is the scientific proof of the great value of humus in the soil—the practical proof being in the fact that the farmers who produce vast yields of such quality seed grains are the ones that use it that their soils have a high percentage of humus.

In Wisconsin this is easy. The hard yard manure, clover, and alfalfa plowed under, in fact the addition of any kind of vegetable matter produces humus—which is nothing else

than organic matter in the process of decay.

There are many other reasons why humus should be added to the soil—in fact so many that it would make the subject of a lecture—but the above ought to be sufficient especially in view of the fact that under Wisconsin conditions it can be done at a profit.

Does Deep Plowing Pay?

Some farmers are content to merely break the soil in an endeavor to make a smile and give them a crop

but other earth only grows and the efforts of the farmer are in vain.

Others dig down deep so that the roots may search for all the nutrition that is hidden there. Even with the general knowledge among advanced agriculturists that deep plowing is beneficial, considerable common has been expressed over the wonderful results of some experiments

CHRISTMAS SEAL SALE STARTS SOON

Milwaukee, Wis., Nov. 3, 1913. (Special)—A call for 1,400 local campaign managers to take charge of the sale of Red Cross Christmas seals in different parts of the state has been issued by Otto F. Bradley, Campaign Manager of the Wisconsin Anti-Tuberculosis Association. This is the opening gun of the 1913 Seal Campaign by which the Association will raise funds for continuing, during the coming year, the campaign that is doing so much for the eradication of preventable disease in Wisconsin.

"More and better care for children" will be the slogan of the campaign. It is maintained by authorities today that it is the solution of the problem expressed in the former battle cry "Wipe Consumption out of Wisconsin." It is also a most important factor in the control of all other preventable diseases.

Thanksgiving day has been set for opening the sale. It will close at Christmas. Last year there were 113 local campaign managers in different localities. The Association expects to enlist at least 1,400 for the 1913 sale, only one manager is appointed in each community and he arranges for the seals to be sold by the business men, organizations and schools.

The Christmas Seal Campaign has the prestige and the contagious influence of being a nation wide movement. There is something inspiring in following in line with the whole country, especially in Wisconsin, which has led the country in making the highest per capita sales in past years. The Wisconsin Anti-Tuberculosis Association during the past year has received this support on the part of the public being continued.

FORMER GRAND RAPIDS BOY GETS INTO REFORMATORY.

Chippewa Times.—Henry Miller, of Tilden was badly beaten and robbed by a man named Thorne about midnight. He and Thorne had attended a church and were walking home. The information secured by District Attorney Wiley was that Miller was struck on the head and rendered unconscious, and that Thorne then took Miller's $75 consignment coat and disappeared. The affair happened within a half mile of Miller's home and Mrs. Miller hearing the noise, rushed to the scene. Thorne flew. He is a young man, a stranger in the community and recently hired out with a Tilden farmer.

Dr. Peterson attended Miller at the hospital and found his head badly bruised up with six cuts on top and one on the face but no fractures. The doctor says the patient will come out safely if blood poisoning can be prevented.

A warrant for the arrest of Thorne was given the sheriff and the officer searched the town of Tilden without finding the man.

THERE WAS NO FOOT RACE ABOUT THIS

La Crosse has come and gone, and they went the way of those that have gone before. It was only 9 to 0, in favor of the Grand Rapids boys, but that was enough to let the visitors know that we were on earth and still kicking.

It is understood that the La Crosse boys came here with the expectation of running up a score of about fifty points on the locals while the home boys stood around the edge of the field and watched the fun. However, they were disappointed and it is probable that they went home with considerably more respect than they brought with them. Possibly our boys may have been a trifle anxious as to what the outcome of the game would be, but if they were they did not show it in their play, but started right in with their usual determination to either win the game or lose it fighting.

During the first quarter it looked as if possibly the visitors might be going to slip one over on our boys, as they got the ball down to the five yard line. But it was only a scare, as they were held there with no damage to the locals' reputation, and the quarter ended 0 to 0.

In the second half, however, the locals seemed to realize that they were still on earth and in the game, and they went after the visitors like a lot of tigers, and they were right after the big fellows at every turn. They were keeping the ball within friendly distance of the La Crosse goal most of the time, so that the visitors had to play on the defensive, and when La Crosse punted Hill caught the ball and made a 50 yard run for a touchdown. Then somebody yelled, 6 to 0 at the end of the first half with the ball in La Crosse territory.

In the third quarter Nash made a drop kick from the 25 yard line that counted four more, and it looked like the visitors were going to be sent home with nothing to their credit but one large goose egg. Subsequent developments proved this to be a fact, for the boys have been playing good foot ball this year, it was hardly to be expected that they would carry off the honors in a contest with a city the size of La Crosse, where they have a great many more to pick from than is the case here. However, they are to be congratulated on the fact that they did not let the La Crosse boys win in their favor. It means that the boys have won every game they went into this year and have not been scored on the entire season. Next Saturday the boys will go to Merrill to play the team up there.

ALTDORF

O. J. Luey of this place and A. T. Benn of Hansen attended a meeting of the officers of the Wood County Agricultural Association Monday. At that meeting it was decided to have a three days' agricultural meeting about the middle of January at which there will be speakers from the University present. This meeting will be free to all and the two main topics to be emphasized this year will be soils and potatoes. There will be a one week's course at Marshfield the fore part of December, similar to the one held in Grand Rapids last year. The school children's corn and oat contest will be held in connection with the Marshfield school. There will be no agricultural contest at Grand Rapids this year, but we want a good potato exhibit in connection with the three days' meeting.

ALTDORF

Anna Ittess and Lenore Kisinger visited at the Robert Leu home last Sunday. John Wilhelm sold a horse to Henry Peterson of Vesper. Frank Huser sold a grade Holstein cow last week for $85.00 and yet some people think it doesn't pay to invest in a pure bred bull, when each helper calf is worth $25.00 more than a scrub calf.

The Schiller boys are getting out rock for their new barn, which they will build next year, and Tony Wipfl is getting material ready for a silo. A. Komatz was sick a few days the last week, but is better again.

"The sooner this case is ended the better it will be for all," says little Evelyn. Are you ready for the question? The eyes have it.

An exchange says that a man passed through Kansas recently with the following inscription on his wagon: "Colorado and elevation, Kansas and stagnation, poplar administration and damnation. For going to my wife's relations and make no further denials." Another exchange suggests "Return to Wisconsin, care for education, where a man with an education can engage in speculation; bring along your wife's relations, have good times and free salvation, and no danger of starvation. This is worth consideration."

—Please take your cutters and sleighs to the Anderson Carriage Works and have them put in proper condition for winter use.

Marquette Eagle-Star, Rep., says: "Well, it's all right to lay the blame on the Democrats, but the national Democratic administration has not hurt things at all. The trouble on the coast is not due to the Democrats either. The western coast has simply been overcome and the natural result has come. Wisconsin and other states with cheap, good lands where any industrious man can make a good living are benefiting now by this 'showing up' of the west and will continue to benefit."

James Garrett of Milwaukee was a pleasant caller in this office on Saturday. Mr. Garrett returned on Thursday from a three weeks visit with his son at Bonner's Ferry, Idaho, where he has charge of the shipping department for the Bonner's Ferry Lumber Co. a concern that manufactures 600,000 feet of lumber a year. Mr. Garrett also visited with his daughter, Mrs. A. A. Allen at Baker City, Idaho. He reports things quite lively in the west, especially the lumber industry.

Really a day passes that some person does not come to the printing office to have some quarrel that they have with their neighbor aired in the columns of the paper. Of course the editor never does it, but still they keep right on trying. The editor of a newspaper does not care particularly about neighborhood quarrels, and if he did it would not be a very nice thing to tell all of his readers about it. Our advice to readers of the Tribune is for people to settle their quarrels among themselves and not run to the paper as soon as they happen to have a disagreement. It will always work out better in the end.

It is rather severe on a mother-in-law, but nevertheless they tell this story on an Irishman who had gone to town to buy something to be worn as a mark of mourning. Going into a gent's furnishing store he told the clerk he wanted something for mourning wear, but not knowing exactly what to get, asked the clerk what was best. "It depends," said the salesman, "on how near a relative you wish to show this mark of respect. For a near relative you should have an all black suit. For some one not so near, a broad band of black on the left arm is sufficient or a somewhat narrower one for some one more distant. 'That being the case,' said the Irishman, 'give me a blue string. It's my wife's mother—Marshfield Herald.

THEBOYCAN READY FOR CONVENTION

—All marvelous and new things pass through three stages, ridicule, discussion, and adoption. Chiropactic has reached the third stage—it is being adopted all over the world. Results are satisfactory. Consult the Chiropactor over Daly's Drug Store.

The vaudeville show given at Daly's Theater on Sunday evening was about the best thing of the kind that has appeared in this city for some time and a pretty good sized audience turned out to see it. Everybody seemed to be pretty well pleased with the show.

Atty. J. J. Jeffrey, Assistant postmaster Chas. Natwick, Dr. E. J. Clark, Duft Natwick, A. P. Hilly, Roy Lester, and August Miller leave the latter part of the week for the wilds of Sawyer county where they will spend two weeks hunting deer in the vicinity of Winter.

Watch for the particulars of the coming drama "The Deep Purple" which will appear at Daly's Theater in the near future. This is a drama that has met with great success in the most critical cities in the country and should appeal to the theater goers of Grand Rapids. Coming soon.

Will Diebold, who is well known in this city, has opened a poultry store on the east side where he will handle live and dressed poultry of all kinds. As Will is quite a poultry fancier and has considerable business experience there is no reason why he should not make a success of the venture.

A dispatch from Madison says that Chas. E. Holmgren, proprietor of the Hotel Holmgren of Marshfield, has had a suit started against him by attorney General Olson for violating the child labor law. It is claimed that he works two girls under 16 years of age in his hotel without having a permit.

The entire block pavement on the east side is now open to the public and it is safe that the public appreciates the chance from the old state of affairs. It is safe to say that nicely paved streets do more to impress the visitor with the neatness of a town than any one thing that can be done to it.

Attorney Geo. P. Hamberg last week received notice of his appointment as a member of the University board of visitors under the new law. While the appointment is mostly an honorary one it is evidence that he is still on the map and that Grand Rapids is thought of when they come to look for a man that is right.

The members of the Elworth League gave a Halloween party at the Methodist church parlors on Friday evening, at which there was a large attendance. The place had been appropriately decorated for the occasion and game was played and a very pleasant evening was spent by those in attendance.

The fire department was called out on Saturday afternoon by a small blaze in the rear of the Mini saloon. A gasoline stove that is used for preparing lunches caught fire and had it not been discovered as soon as it was it is entirely possible that there would have been a serious conflagration. As it was the damage was very slight.

Thursday afternoon, a party consisting of Mr. and Mrs. Chris Hassel, Mrs. C. J. Hosen, Mrs. N. Christensen and daughter Ruth, Mrs. J. Cashner, Mrs. Emma Johnson, the Misses Clara and Irma Hassel and Rev. H. B. Johnson attended the Rudolph Moravian Ladies aid society meeting which was held at the home of Mrs. John Johnson. They report having had a most enjoyable time.

Peter Peterson and family of Waukegan county, who recently purchased the Joe Andrew farm in the town of Seneca, arrived on Monday to take possession of his farm. Mr. Peterson is a general farmer and it is his intention to continue the milk route established by Mr. Andrew several years ago. Mr. and Mrs. Andrew will move back to their former home in Fond du Lac some time this week.

L. B. Carl, the man who was confined in the county jail charged with embezzling the electric light funds at Marshfield, left for that city on Wednesday soon after obtaining bail. Mr. Carl made the statement that there had been no embezzlement of the funds as charged, and that if the matter were thoroughly investigated he would be found to be guiltless in the matter. According to his statement it is all a mistake, and he says that if there is any shortage discovered that he will make it good himself.

The Dance of Yesterday.
Shute your partner; let her go.
Balance all and do-si-do;
Swing your girl and run away;
Right and left on; gent's shahay;
Gents to right, and swing or cheat;
On to next girl an' repeat.
Balance next an' don't be shy;
Swing your girl an' swing 'er high;
Hunch the girl and circle 'er round;
Whack your feet until they pound;
Alman left an' balance all;
Lift your heels an' let 'em fall;
Back to partner, do-si-do;
All join hands an' off you go.
And this is the style of call-off in vogue these days:
Salute your partner, grab her there;
Snap your fingers. It's a bear.
Slide an' then your shoulders shrug;
Do the willy bunny hug;
Write and wiggle 'round the hall.
Hold her tight. Don't let her fall.
Siney, snake movements now.
Be as graceful as a cow.
Swing around one little spot.
Break off in the turkey trot.
Now the tango. Come, be quick.
See how high you can kick.
Twist and turn and squirm and sway.
That's what's termed a dance to-day.—Ex.

SHEBOYGAN READY FOR CONVENTION

Sheboygan is all ready for Wisconsin's Fifty-third State Sunday School Convention, which will meet there Nov. 11-13. The splendid Opera House and five of the churches will be used for the various sessions. Every Sunday School worker in the state should attend the convention.

A School of Methods covering every department of Sunday School activity will be conducted by a faculty of specialists of wide reputation.

This convention will show a marked development in Sunday School work in the state, and also in the work of the Wisconsin Sunday School Association.

The Association now employs for the benefit of all Sunday Schools of the state three Field Workers. Mr. F. E. Brigham, who came to the General Secretaryship of the Association a year and a half ago from a successful pastorate at Wausau; Miss Mabel L. Bailey, Elementary, Specialist, of Missouri, who has already made a large place for herself in the Sunday School work of the state, and is constantly giving practical assistance to multitudes of workers with children.

Mr. R. C. Mack, who has recently been added to the force of the State Association, coming from Columbus, Ohio, where he had been, significantly successful in Public Recreation work, Boy Scout and Y. M. C. A. work, is making a specialty of Sunday School and general welfare work among those of the Teen Age.

Continued shooting of the pinated grouse means its final extermination. It may be true that in some counties where they are protected they may have increased, but the great numbers that decorated the state in 1905 are gone. Any person who doubts the extermination of the prairie chicken is certainly ignorant of the history of the extinction of the eastern prairie chicken. In some counties of Wisconsin the booming of the male bird that was so commonly heard formerly is silent, and the ruthless manner is responsible. A bird that migrates from state to state is a migratory bird, and comes within the intent of the migratory bird law. Can we not live for five years at least without the flesh of prairie chicken? Is hunting of a nearly exterminated species sport?

I appeal to all true sportsmen, to all bird-lovers, to all organizations, teachers, and others that appreciate the beauties of nature, if you wish to save from extermination the above birds to write at once and state your views. I may not be able to answer your letters, but I shall certainly place them before the proper committee concerned in saving from extermination some of our best and most beautiful, as well as valuable bird life in this country.

E. A. CLEASHY,
Acting President of Wisconsin Audubon Society.

NEWS ITEMS FROM NEARBY PLACES

Foxes Returned.—A pair of silver grey foxes valued at $1500 have been held at the express office for the past week on account of misrepresentation. The consignment came to Fromme Bros., the well known fox breeders, who have a large fox farm near this city, and upon examining the animals found that one of them was afflicted with mange. They came from Georgetown, Ont. They came rejected by Fromme Bros. on account of the infectious disease one had contracted.—Merrill News.

Got Big Damages.—In the United States court at St. Paul a jury recently returned a verdict of $29,000 in favor of William F. McMahon and against the Illinois Central Railway company. McMahon was a brakeman and at Ambrose, Ill. he was run over by sixteen cars and a caboose, sustaining the loss of both arms one below and the other above the elbow. Both legs were also severely injured. Walter D. Corrigan, well known here, was one of the lawyers for the plaintiff. The trial lasted ten days.

Young Man Shot.—James Wolfe, a local on a farm three miles from Juneau about twenty-two years of age, and who was accidentally shot in his left arm Sunday morning and that afternoon was brought to St. Michael's hospital in this city for treatment. A charge of fine shot entered the fleshy part of the arm, tearing away much of the flesh from the elbow to a short distance above the wrist and from the palm of the hand. However, from present indications, amputation will not be necessary. Details of the accident are to the effect that young Wolfe and his father, George Wolfe, were hunting and that the son's shotgun was discharged when he was about to rest it on a stump.—Stevens Point Journal.

Death of Edna Olson.
The death of Edna Amelia Olson occurred early Monday morning, November 3, 1913, after an illness of ten months. The cause of her death was cancer of the stomach.

She was born in Juneau county on February 8, 1894. In 1899, she came with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. O. Olson, to reside in this city. Besides her parents she had two brothers, Marcus and Leonard, and many friends to mourn her early departure.

The funeral will be held from the home, 445 Tenth Avenue North, at 2 o'clock, Wednesday afternoon. The Rev. H. B. Johnson will conduct the services.

Scandinavian Moravian Church.
On Thursday, the ladies aid society will meet in Biron as the guests of Mrs. Chris Olson. Those desiring to attend may take the automobile which leaves Johnson & Hill's corner at 2 p. m., sharp. The return trip will begin at 5:30. Fare 10 cents each way.

The Willing Workers will meet Thursday evening in the church, on Sunday morning the celebration of the Holy Communion will follow the Scandinavian preaching service.

How They Skinned Us.
All kinds and sizes of false weights and measures are exhibited in the assembly chamber at Madison as a feature of the meeting of state weights and measures officials. These "frauds" have been confiscated from dealers all over the state and show to what an extent people of Wisconsin have been imposed upon.

The exhibit includes measures with false bottoms, sliding-front scales and invertebrate berry boxes.

Auto Owners Take Notice.
—We are going to paint automobiles this winter and are pleased to announce that the auto show after work is in progress. In up-to-date auto and paint departments in larger cities has returned to Grand Rapids and will take charge of our paint department. This will enable us to guarantee entire satisfaction. Please consult us as soon as possible. The Anderson Carriage Works.

CLEASHY PLEADS FOR BETTER PROTECTION OF WILD FOWL

Here are some reasons why the wood duck and woodcock should be given a five year closed season. The prairie chicken also needs a five year rest from the ruthless hunter.

The wood duck is the most beautiful bird of this or any other continent, outside possibly of the mandarin duck of China. There never was or ought to be time when it is right to kill this most beautiful of nature's gifts for the sole purpose of eating it. This bird has a right to live, if any bird has a right to live because of its beauty, in order to beautify our woods and waters and make outdoor life more interesting. I appeal to the aesthetic sense of sensible Americans everywhere in behalf of this bird. From this time henceforth barbarians and game wags should abstain from a desire of slaughter of this bird in order to strip off its plumage and eat it. Any man who can kill a wood duck for food can not be trusted to refrain from destroying Murrel's "Immaculate Conception" in order to sell his potatoes with its frame for fuel.

The slaughter of the wood duck in order to fill the flesh pots of Mr. Chin and his little Chins is too gross and brutal to be tolerated in a civilized country.

The woodcock has been hunted until it has been nearly exterminated. No less an authority than the United States department of agriculture has served a warning that this bird is nearly exterminated. One of the gamblers that ever decorated a convict and eagerly sought after by gamblers needs at least a five year rest to save it from absolute extermination.

It feeds on worms and other insects which it digs from the ground by the use of its long bill, and thus is of much value to agriculture.

Continued shooting of the pinated grouse means its final extermination. It may be true that in some counties where they are protected they may have increased, but the great numbers that decorated the state in 1905 are gone. Any person who doubts the extermination of the prairie chicken is certainly ignorant of the history of the extinction of the eastern prairie chicken. In some counties of Wisconsin the booming of the male bird that was so commonly heard formerly is silent, and the ruthless manner is responsible. A bird that migrates from state to state is a migratory bird, and comes within the intent of the migratory bird law. Can we not live for five years at least without the flesh of prairie chicken? Is hunting of a nearly exterminated species sport?

I appeal to all true sportsmen, to all bird-lovers, to all organizations, teachers, and others that appreciate the beauties of nature, if you wish to save from extermination the above birds to write at once and state your views. I may not be able to answer your letters, but I shall certainly place them before the proper committee concerned in saving from extermination some of our best and most beautiful, as well as valuable bird life in this country.

E. A. CLEASHY,
Acting President of Wisconsin Audubon Society.

Foxes Returned.—A pair of silver grey foxes valued at $1500 have been held at the express office for the past week on account of misrepresentation. The consignment came to Fromme Bros., the well known fox breeders, who have a large fox farm near this city, and upon examining the animals found that one of them was afflicted with mange. They came from Georgetown, Ont. They came rejected by Fromme Bros. on account of the infectious disease one had contracted.—Merrill News.

Got Big Damages.—In the United States court at St. Paul a jury recently returned a verdict of $29,000 in favor of William F. McMahon and against the Illinois Central Railway company. McMahon was a brakeman and at Ambrose, Ill. he was run over by sixteen cars and a caboose, sustaining the loss of both arms one below and the other above the elbow. Both legs were also severely injured. Walter D. Corrigan, well known here, was one of the lawyers for the plaintiff. The trial lasted ten days.

Young Man Shot.—James Wolfe, a local on a farm three miles from Juneau about twenty-two years of age, and who was accidentally shot in his left arm Sunday morning and that afternoon was brought to St. Michael's hospital in this city for treatment. A charge of fine shot entered the fleshy part of the arm, tearing away much of the flesh from the elbow to a short distance above the wrist and from the palm of the hand. However, from present indications, amputation will not be necessary. Details of the accident are to the effect that young Wolfe and his father, George Wolfe, were hunting and that the son's shotgun was discharged when he was about to rest it on a stump.—Stevens Point Journal.

"MRS. KELLEY" IS A NATIVE BADGER

By Lieut. Col. J. A. Watrous.
Milwaukee Sentinel.—I do not write to advertise Burton Holmes. Judging from the packed houses that have greeted him he needs no advertising.

As his audiences noted the unfolding of the almost miraculous achievements of the American government in the Philippines the past fifteen years they must have experienced great satisfaction at what their country had done for a benighted and oppressed people, and their love of country must have increased.

In the lecture of Thursday night Wisconsin people, whether that audience realized it or not, have a special reason for pride in the good work that Uncle Sam is doing in the Philippine Islands. One of the delightful features of the lecture appeared when Mr. Holmes began to talk about "Good morning, Mrs. Kelley." I wonder how many of that audience knew that the Mrs. Kelley who had brought about such a wonderful transformation in the array of florite girls and young women, is a native of Wisconsin, and that for many years her home was at Grand Rapids, Wis.

She was a Wisconsin teacher, having had schools in her own county and in the city of Merrill. She is the daughter of a Wisconsin man. Her father, Duncan McKay, is a member of Wisconsin consistory of Scottish Rite Masons. Soon after her marriage to Mr. Kelley in 1890 they went to Manila, Mrs. Kelley to teach and her husband as an expert mining engineer to look after mining interests.

Owing to the unsettled condition of affairs in the islands their plans were changed. They rented the house owned by the Spanish admiral who commanded the fleet which Dewey destroyed, and established a home for American officers and their families. That pleasant home on San Subastian street was one of the most popular places for Americans in Manila.

After remaining there nearly two years they went to the new town, just begun, of Benguet, which for years has been the summer headquarters for the Philippine government. There Mr. Kelley carried on his work as a mining expert. He had a part in opening one of the most successful gold mines in the islands. Mrs. Kelley gave her attention to teaching the favorite child. The school is known throughout the islands as "Mrs. Kelley's school," and one of the first things that the inhabitants of the provinces of Benguet and Bontoc learned to say was: "Good morning, Mrs. Kelley." Not hundreds but thousands and tens of thousands of people, whenever they addressed an American of any other white man or white woman who visited these provinces said, "Good morning, Mrs. Kelley."

Through the splendid management of this most worthy native of Wisconsin many thousands of those people now talk English distinctly and their achievements in all directions toward civilization have been remarkable, and "Good morning, Mrs. Kelley" is truly entitled to much of the credit the audience will recall the parade of a large number of Mrs. Kelley's girl students and that she brought up the left arm of the column. There were men in that audience who remembered the talented lady and felt like applauding after she passed on after her brown faced army. One of them had found a most delightful home, with her father, Gen. MacArthur, and he also had a large part in planting the splendid school system that has resulted in giving more than 1,000,000 of the natives an education in the English language; a school system that promises to reach every nook and corner of the islands and afford every one an opportunity to learn.

Without boasting, Wisconsin could claim to have had a very large part in the uplifting and advance in the Philippines. Mrs. Kelley's efforts have brought grand results. Certainly no one military man had so much to do with bringing about peace as the late Lieut. Gen. MacArthur, and he also had a large part in planting the splendid school system that has resulted in giving more than 1,000,000 of the natives an education in the English language; a school system that promises to reach every nook and corner of the islands and afford every one an opportunity to learn.

I'm going to my wife's relations and make no further demonstrations." The trouble on the coast is not due to the Democrats either. The western coast has simply been overdone and the natural result has come. Wisconsin and other states with cheap good lands where any industrious man can make a good living are benefiting now by this showing up of the west and will continue to benefit."

James Garret of Milladore was a pleasant caller in this office on Saturday. Mr. Garret returned on Thursday from a three weeks visit with his son Kenneth's Rev. Idaho winter where he has charge of the shipping department for the Bonner's Ferry Lumber Co. a concern that manufactures 60,000,000 feet of lumber a year. Mr. Garret also visited with his daughter, Mrs. A. A. Allen at Baker City, Idaho. He reports things quite lively in the west, excepting the lumber industry.

Hardly a day passes that some person does not come to the printing office to have some quarrel about they have with their neighbor aired in the columns of the paper. Of course the editor never does it, but still they keep right on trying. The editor of a newspaper does not care particularly about neighborhood quarrels, and if he did it would not be a very nice thing to tell all of his readers about. Our advice to readers of the Tribune is for people to settle their quarrels among themselves and not run to the paper as soon as they happen to have a disagreement. It will always work out better in the end.

It is rather severe on a mother-in-law, but nevertheless they tell this story on an Irishman who had gone to town to buy something to be worn as a mark of mourning. Going into a hatters' (turning store he told the clerk he wanted something for mourning wear, but not knowing exactly what to get, asked the clerk what was best. "It depends," said the salesman, "on how near a relative you wish to show this mark of respect. For a near relative you should have an all black suit. For some one not so near, a broad band of black on the left arm is sufficient or a somewhat narrower one for some one more distant." "That being the case," said the Irishman, "give me a shoe string. It's my wife's mother.—Marshfield Herald.

Will Dieckrich, who is well known in this city, has opened a poultry store on the east side where he will handle live and dressed poultry of all kinds. As Will is quite a poultry fancier and has considerable business experience there is no reason why he should not make a success of the venture.

A dispatch from Madison says that Chas. E. Blodgett, proprietor of the Hotel Blodgett of Marshfield, has had a suit started against him by Attorney General Owen for violating the child labor law. It is claimed that he worked two girls under 16 years of age in his hotel without having a permit.

The entire brick pavement on the east side is now open to the public and it is safe that the public appreciates the change from the old state of affairs. It is safe to say that nicely paved streets do more to impress the visitor with the neatness of a town than any one thing that can be done to it.

Attorney Geo. P. Hambricht last week received notice of his appointment as a member of the University board of visitors under the new law. While the appointment is mostly an honorary one it is evidence that we are still on the map and that Grand Rapids is thought of when they commence to look for a man that is right.

The members of the Epworth League gave a Halloween party at the Methodist church parlors on Friday evening, at which there was a large attendance. The place had been appropriately decorated for the occasion and games were played and a very pleasant evening was spent by those in attendance.

The fire department was called out on Saturday afternoon by a small blaze in the rear of the Mint saloon. A gasoline stove that is used for preparing lunches caught fire and had it not been discovered as soon as it was it is entirely probable that there would have been a serious conflagration. As it was the damage was very slight.

Thursday afternoon, a party consisting of Mr. and Mrs. Chris Hassel, Mrs. C. J. Roosen, Mrs. N. Christensen and daughter Ruth, Mrs. J. Casberg, Mrs. Emma Johnson, the Misses Clara and Irma Hassel and Rev. H. B. Johnson attended the Rudolph Moravian Ladies aid society meeting which was held at the home of Mrs. John Johnson. They report having had a most enjoyable time.

Peter Peterson and family of Waukesha county, who recently purchased the Joe Andrew farm in the town of Seneca, arrived on Monday to take possession of his farm. Mr. Peterson is a practical farmer and it is his intention to continue the milk route established by Mr. Andrew several years ago. Mr. and Mrs. Andrew will move back to their former home in Fond du Lac some time this week.

L. B. Carl, the man who was confined in the county jail charged with stealing the electric light funds at Marshfield, left for that city on Wednesday soon after obtaining bail. Mr. Carl made the statement that there had been no embezzlement of the funds as charged, and that if the matter were thoroughly investigated he would be found to be guiltless in the matter.

According to his statement it is all a mistake, and he says that if there is any shortage discovered that he will make it good himself.

The Dance of Yesterday.

State your partner; let her go; Balance all and do it do; Swing your girl and run away; Right and left on; gents sashay; Gents to right, and saying or cheat; On to next girl all repeat. Exchange all don't be shy; Swing your partner and swing her high; Bunch the girls and circle round; Whack your feet until they bound; Alaman left an' balance all; Lift your hoofs an' let 'em fall; Back to partner, do it do; All join hands an' off you go; And this is the style of call-off in vogue these days.

Salute your partner, grab her there; Snap your fingers. It's a bear. Glide an' then your shoulders shrug; Do the willie bunny hug; Write and wiggle, round the hall; Told her light. Don't let her fall. Siney, siney movements now. Be as graceful as a cow. Swing around one little spot. Break off in the turkey trot. Now the tango. Come, be quick. See how high you two can kick. Twist and turn and squirm and sway. That's what's termed a dance to-day.

PREVENTING DEAFNESS

Last week, Golden, an ether treatment and prevention were discussed in this column. In the minds of physicians, as well as in the heads of their patients, the ears are closely associated with the nose and throat. Ordinary colds commonlyadden the sense of hearing temporarily. This transient deafness is important only as it signifies how many cases of permanent deafness result from blowing the nose improperly. According to a prominent Milwaukee specialist in diseases of the ear, a very large percentage of deafness is caused by permanent stretching of the ear drum.

As was said last week, the internal ear apparatus is connected with the nose by an air passage, which passage is called the Eustachian Tube. The purpose of this connection is to keep an even pressure upon both sides of the ear drum.

Everyone has probably been conscious of more or less temporary deafness after vigorous blowing of the nose, particularly when the nostrils are "stuffed up." This temporary deafness is due to plugging of the Eustachian Tube at its point of opening into the nasal passages with temporary ballooning of the ear drum.

A rubber band will lose its elasticity if repeatedly stretched beyond its normal limits. Just so will the ear drum. The ear drum which loses its elasticity will obviously be incapable of those fine, small vibrations upon which hearing is dependent. In blowing the nose, one should be exceedingly careful to avoid closing the nostrils and particularly to avoid the explosive method that one occasionally sees and hears.

Animal Oddities.

Wasps are almost as industrious as ants. The moth has a fur jacket and the butterfly none. There are 80,000 kinds of beetles. A horse sometimes sheds real tears of anguish. Most birds eat two and one half times their own weight every day. The peacock has a very long span of life, reaching even to the century.

CLEASBY PLEADS FOR BETTER PROTECTION OF WILD FOWL.

Here are some reasons why the wood duck and woodcock should be given a five year closed season. The prairie chicken also needs a five year rest from the ruthless gunner.

The wood duck is the most beautiful bird of this or any other continent outside possibly of the mandarin duck of China. There never was or ought to be a time when it is right to kill this most beautiful of nature's gifts for the sole purpose of eating it. This bird has a right to live, if any bird has a right to live because of its beauty, in order to beautify our woods and waters and make outdoor life more interesting. I appeal to the aesthetic sense of sensible Americans everywhere in behalf of this bird. From this time henceforth barbarians and game hogs can find in their stomachs a desire of slaughter of this bird in order to strip off its plumage and eat it. Any person who can kill a wood duck for food can not be trusted to refrain from destroying Murrel's "Immaculate Conception" in order to boll his potatoes with its frame for fuel. The slaughter of the wood duck in order to fill the flesh pots of Mr. Chin and his little Chims is too gross and brutal to be tolerated in a civilized country.

The woodcock has been hunted until it has been nearly exterminated. No less an authority than the United States department of agriculture has served a warning that this bird is nearly exterminated. One of the gamest birds that ever decorated a covert and eagerly sought a cover by gunners at least a five year rest to save it from absolute extermination. It feeds on worms and other insects which it digs from the ground by the use of its long bill, and thus is of much value to agriculture.

Continued shooting of the pinnated species means its final extermination. It may be true that in some counties where they are protected they may have increased, but the great numbers that decorated the state in 1865 are gone. Any person who doubts the extermination of the prairie chicken is certainly ignorant of the history of the extinction of the eastern prairie chicken.

In some counties of Wisconsin the booming of the male bird that was so commonly heard formerly is silent, and the ruthless gunner is responsible. A bird that migrates from state to state is a migratory bird, and comes within the intent of the migratory bird law. Can we not live for five years at least without the flesh of prairie chicken? Is hunting of a nearly exterminated species sport?

I appeal to all true sportsmen, to all bird-lovers, to all organizations, teachers, and others that appreciate the beauties of nature, if you wish to save from extermination the above birds to write at once and state your case. I may not be able to answer your letters, but I shall certainly place them before the proper committee concerned in saving from extermination some of our best and most beautiful, as well as valuable bird life in this country.

E. A. CLEASBY,
Acting President of Wisconsin Audubon Society.

They rented the house owned by the Spanish admiral who commanded the fleet which Dewey destroyed, and established a home for American officers and their families. That pleasant home on San Sebastian street was one of the most popular places for Americans in Manila.

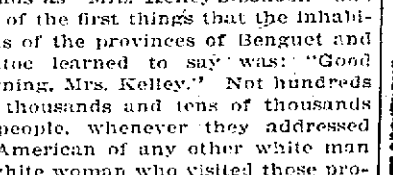

After remaining there nearly two years they went to the new town, just begun, of Benguet, which for years has been the summer headquarters for the Philippine government. There Mrs. Kelley carried on his work as a mining expert. He had a part in opening one of the most successful gold mines in the islands. Mrs. Kelley gave her attention to teaching the Igorote girls. The school is known throughout the islands as "Mrs. Kelley's school" and one of the first things that the inhabitants of the provinces of Benguet and Bontoc learned to say was: "Good morning, Mrs. Kelley." Not hundreds but thousands and tens of thousands of people, whenever they addressed an American of any other white man or white woman who visited those provinces said, "Good morning, Mrs. Kelley."

Through the splendid management of this most worthy native of Wisconsin many thousands of those people now talk English distinctly and their achievements in all directions toward civilization has been remarkable, and all "Good morning, Mrs. Kelley" is justly entitled to much of the credit. The audience will recall the parade of a large number of Mrs. Kelley's girls students and that she brought up the rear of the column. There were men in butaudiences who recognized the talented lady and felt like applauding after she passed on after her brown faced army. One of them had found a most delightful home, with her family of American officers, in the far away Philippines early in the history of American occupation of Manila.

Without boasting, Wisconsin could claim to have had a very large part in the uplifting and advance in the Philippines. Mrs. Kelley's efforts have brought grand results. Certainly no one military man had so much to do with bringing about peace as the late Lieut. Gen. MacArthur, and he also had a large part in planting the splendid school system that has resulted in giving more than 1,000,000 of the natives an education in the English language; a school system that promises to reach every nook and corner of the islands and afford every one an opportunity to learn.

Imaginary Heart Trouble

Do you have pains in the region of the heart? Does your heart thump? Its terrible pounding greatly alarms you? What is wrong? Do you believe these symptoms mean heart trouble? Organic diseases of the heart very seldom occasion much pain, but are deathly and deadly. Nine-tenths of the pains supposed to be in the heart, are either in or caused by some derangement of the stomach. Often a dyspeptic imagines he has heart disease.

CHAPTER XVI.

The Tumult in Human Hearts.
Of the frightful nights in Richmond during the siege, that night was one of the worst. The comparative calmness of the earlier hours of repose in the quiet April evening gave way to pandemonium. The works at Petersburg, desperately held by the Confederates, were miles away from the city to the southward, but such was the tremendous nature of the cannonading that the shocking sounds seemed to be close at hand. Children covered, women shuddered, and old men played as they thought of the furious onslaughts in the battle raging.

The Richmond streets were filled with people, mostly invalids, non-combatants, women and children. A tremendous attack was being launched by the besiegers somewhere, it was evident. Urgent messengers from General Lee called every reserve out of the garrison at Richmond, and the quiet streets and country highways awoke instantly to life. Such troops as could be spared moved to the front at the double-quick. Every car of the dilapidated railroad was pressed into service. Those who could not be transported by train went on horseback or afoot. "The youngest boy and the oldest man alike shouldered their muskets, and with motley clothes, but with hearts aflame, marched to the sound of the cannon. The women, the sick, the wounded and invalid men and the children waited.

Morning would tell the tale. Into the city from which they marched, men and boys would come back; an army rarely as fresh as the one that went out. An army halting, maimed, helpless, wounded, suffering, shot to pieces. They had seen it too often not to be able to forecast the scene accurately. They knew with what heroic determination their veterans, under the great Lee, were fighting back the terrific attacks of their brothers in blue, under the grimly determined Grant. They could hear his great hammer ringing off their ears, a hammer of men and steel, a hammer of no plan, success or no success of some secret service operations, some vital point was being wrestled for in a death-grapple between two armies; and all the offensive capacities of the one and all the defensive resources of the other were meeting, as they had been meeting during the long years.

In a time like that, of public peril and public need, private and personal affairs ought to be forgotten, but it was not so. Love and hate, confidence and jealousy, faithfulness and disloyalty, self-sacrifice and revenge, were still in human hearts. And these feelings would put to shame even the passions engendered in the bloody battles of the fearful warfare.

Edith Varney, for instance, had gone out of the telegraph office assured that her husband had made for her lover had resulted in betrayal of her country; that Thorne had not even the common gratitude to accede to her request, although she had saved his life, and, for the time being, his honor. Every cannon-shot, every flashing volley of musketry that came faintly or loudly across the hills seemed pointed straight at her heart. For all she knew, the dispatch had been sent, the cunningly devised scheme had been carried out, and the federal troops were pouring. The defense would crumble and the army would be cut to two; the city of Richmond would be taken, and the Confederacy would be lost.

And she had done it! Would she have done it if she had known? She had certainly expected to establish such a claim upon her husband's affection that he could not disregard it. But if she had known positively that he would have done what she thought he did, would she have sent him to his death? She put the question to herself in agony. And she realized with flushes of shame and waves of contrition that she would not, could not have done this thing. She must have acted as she had, whatever he did, she loved that man.

The affair had been irritating beyond expression to Mr. Arrelsford. It had taken him some time to establish his innocence and to get his bearings from General Randolph's custody. Meanwhile, everything that he had hoped to prevent had happened. To do him justice, he really loved Edith Varney, and the thought that her actions and her words had caused his own undoing and the failure of his carefully laid plans, filled him with bitterness, which he vented in increased animosity toward Thorne.

And those were dreadful moments to Thorne. What had he done? He had risked everything, would, indeed, be forced to do so in the end, and yet he had not done that which he had intended. Had he been false to his duty and to his country when he refused to send that telegram, being given the opportunity? He could not tell. The ethics of the question were beyond his present solution. The opportunity had come to him through a piece of sublime self-sacrifice on the part of the woman who knew him thoroughly and purpose, had yet perjured her self to save his life.

That life was hers, was it not? He had become her prisoner as much as if she had placed him under lock and key and held him without the possibility of communication with anyone. Her honor was involved. No, under the circumstances, he could not send the dispatch. The Confederates would certainly kill him if they caught him, and if they did not, by any providential chance he escaped, his honor would compel him to report the circumstances, the cause of his failure, to his own superiors. Would they count-martial him for not sending the dispatch? Would they enter into his feelings, would they understand? He stood looking at Foray for a while, and then, without a further command to that intensely surprised young man, or even a word of explanation, he seized his hat and coat and left the room. Foray was a keen-witted officer, he reviewed the situation briefly, and presently a great light dawned upon him. A certain admiration for Thorne developed in his breast, and as Allison opportunely came back at this juncture, he turned over the telegraph office to his subordinate, and in his turn went out on what he believed to be an exceedingly important errand.

Thorne found the streets full of people. He had not marked the beginning of the cannonading in the tumult of the office, but the lights, the bells, the pealing alarms from every church-steeple, the trampling of horses and men, and the roll of the gun-carriages apprised him of what was toward. Trusting that Thorne had been able to carry out his part, Grant was attacking the place indicated by "Plan 3" in heavy force.

Why was Thorne to do? Obviously attempt to escape from Richmond, although it would be a matter of extreme difficulty on account of the alarm which now aroused every section. He could not go, either, until he had seen his brother. He surmised that he was dead, but he could not know that, and he determined not to attempt to leave without making sure of his brother. It was a duty he owed to his brother, to his father in the Union army, and to his superiors in the federal secret service. If that brother were alive, he must be at the Varney house. He fancied that he would run as little chance of being observed in the excitement going in that direction as in any other, and he started to make his way there.

The fact that Edith was there influenced him also. Was the call of love and the living as great, or greater, than the call of duty and the dying of the dead? Who shall say?

And the remote chance that he might be observed on the way was taken by his over-vigilant enemy; for Arrelsford, upon obtaining his freedom, had sent the troops at the disposal of the secret service to hunt him down, and one of them caught sight of him. The shout of discovery apprised him of his discovery. He threw one glance behind him and then ran for his life. He had no special hope of escaping, but he might get to the Varney house ahead of the soldiers, and he might see his brother, and he might see the woman he loved for a moment before he was taken and killed.

CHAPTER XVII.

Wilfred Plays the Man.

A sharp contrast to the noise outside was presented by the quiet of the Varney house inside. The sewing women, in view of the attack and the movements of the boys and the old men, had separated sooner than they had intended and had gone to their several ways. Old Jonas, frightened to death, remained locked up in the closet where he had been left by Arrelsford's men. Martha was upstairs in Howard's room, making ready to watch over him during the night.

Caroline Mitford had not gone home. She had sent word that she intended to pass the night at the Varney house. Somehow she thought they seemed to need her. She was standing by one of the long front windows in the drawing-room, now a scene of much disorder because of the recent struggle. Caroline stared out of the window at the flashes of light. She listened, with beating breast and throbbing heart, to the roar of the cannon and the rattle of musketry. She had heard both many times lately, but now it was different for Wilfred was there. Mrs. Varney came upon her with her hand pressed against her breast, her face white and staring, tears burning her eyes, but, as usual, Mrs. Varney was so engrossed with her own tremendous troubles that she had little thought for the girl.

"Caroline," she began anxiously, "tell me what happened. Edith won't speak to me. She has locked herself up in her room. What was it? Where has she been?"

"She was at the telegraph office," answered Caroline in a low voice.

"What did she do there? What happened there?"

"I am not sure."

"But try to tell me, dear."

"I would if I could, Mrs. Varney, but I was afraid and ran out and waited for her in the hall. The rest of them—"

Wilfred Plays the Man.

A sharp contrast to the noise outside was presented by the quiet of the Varney house inside. The sewing women, in view of the attack and the movements of the boys and the old men, had separated sooner than they had intended and had gone to their several ways. Old Jonas, frightened to death, remained locked up in the closet where he had been left by Arrelsford's men. Martha was upstairs in Howard's room, making ready to watch over him during the night.

Caroline Mitford had not gone home. She had sent word that she intended to pass the night at the Varney house. Somehow she thought they seemed to need her. She was standing by one of the long front windows in the drawing-room, now a scene of much disorder because of the recent struggle. Caroline stared out of the window at the flashes of light. She listened, with beating breast and throbbing heart, to the roar of the cannon and the rattle of musketry. She had heard both many times lately, but now it was different for Wilfred was there. Mrs. Varney came upon her with her hand pressed against her breast, her face white and staring, tears burning her eyes, but, as usual, Mrs. Varney was so engrossed with her own tremendous troubles that she had little thought for the girl.

"Caroline," she began anxiously, "tell me what happened. Edith won't speak to me. She has locked herself up in her room. What was it? Where has she been?"

"She was at the telegraph office," answered Caroline in a low voice.

"What did she do there? What happened there?"

"I am not sure."

"But try to tell me, dear."

"I would if I could, Mrs. Varney, but I was afraid and ran out and waited for her in the hall. The rest of them—"

He stood looking at Foray for a while, and then, without a further command to that intensely surprised young man, or even a word of explanation, he seized his hat and coat and left the room. Foray was a keen-witted officer, he reviewed the situation briefly, and presently a great light dawned upon him. A certain admiration for Thorne developed in his breast, and as Allison opportunely came back at this juncture, he turned over the telegraph office to his subordinate, and in his turn went out on what he believed to be an exceedingly important errand.

Thorne found the streets full of people. He had not marked the beginning of the cannonading in the tumult of the office, but the lights, the bells, the pealing alarms from every church-steeple, the trampling of horses and men, and the roll of the gun-carriages apprised him of what was toward. Trusting that Thorne had been able to carry out his part, Grant was attacking the place indicated by "Plan 3" in heavy force.

Why was Thorne to do? Obviously attempt to escape from Richmond, although it would be a matter of extreme difficulty on account of the alarm which now aroused every section. He could not go, either, until he had seen his brother. He surmised that he was dead

Milwaukee, Wis., Nov. 3, 1913. (Special)—A call for 1,400 local campaign managers to take charge of the sale of Red Cross Christmas Seals in different parts of the state has been issued by the Wisconsin Anti-Tuberculosis Association. This is the opening gun of the 1913 Seal Campaign by which the Association will raise funds for continuing, during the coming year, the campaign that is doing so much for the eradication of preventable disease in Wisconsin.

"More and Better Care for Children" will be the slogan of the campaign. It is maintained by authorities today that this is the solution of the problem expressed in the former battle cry "Wipe Consumption out of Wisconsin." It is also a most important factor in the control of all other preventable diseases.

Thanksgiving day has been set for opening the sale. It will close at Christmas. Last year there were 119 local managers in different localities but the Association expects to enlist at least 1,400 for the 1913 sale. Only one manager is appointed in each community and he arranges for the sale to be held by the business men, organizations and schools.

The Christmas Seal Campaign has the prestige and the contagious influence of being a nation wide movement. There is something inspiring in following in line with the whole country, especially in Wisconsin, which has led the country in making the highest per capita sales in past years. The accomplishments of the Wisconsin Anti-Tuberculosis Association during the past year insure this support on the part of the public being continued.

FORMER GRAND RAPIDS BOY GETS INTO REFORMATORY.

Chippewa Times.—Henry Miller, of Tilden was badly beaten and robbed by a man named Thorne about midnight. He and Thorne had attended a church and were walking home.

The information secured by District Attorney Wiley was that Miller was struck on the head and rendered unconscious, and that Thorne then took Miller's $75 coonskin coat and disappeared. The affair happened within a half mile of Miller's home and Mrs. Miller hearing the noise, rushed to the scene. Thorne fled. He is a young man, a stranger in the community and recently hired out with a Tilden farmer.

Dr. Ellensson attended Miller at the hospital and found his head badly pounded up with six cuts on top and two on the face but no fractures. The doctor says the patient will come out safely if blood poisoning can be prevented.

THERE WAS NO FOOT RACE ABOUT THIS

La Crosse has come and gone, and they went the way of those that have gone before. It was only 9 to 0, in favor of the Grand Rapids boys, but that was enough to let the visitors know that we were on earth and still kicking.

It is understood that the La Crosse boys came here with the expectation of running up a score of about fifty points on the locals while the home boys stood around the edge of the field and watched the fun. However, they were disappointed and it is probable that they went home with considerably more respect than they brought with them. Possibly our boys may have been a trifle anxious as to what the outcome of the game would be, but if they were they did not show it in their play, but started right in with their usual determination to either win the game or lose it fighting.

During the first quarter it looked as if possibly the visitors might be going to slip one over on our boys, as they got the ball down to the five yard line, but it was only a scare, and they were held there with no damage to the locals reputation, and the quarter ended 0 to 0.

In the second half, however, the locals seemed to realize that they were still on earth and in the game, and they went after the visitors like a lot of tigers and they were right after the big fellows at every turn. They were keeping the ball within friendly distance of the La Crosse goal most of the time, so that the visitors had to play on the defensive, and when La Crosse punted Hill caught the ball and made a 50 yard run for a touchdown. Then somebody yelled, 6 to 0 at the end of the first half with the ball in La Crosse territory.

In the third quarter Nash made a drop kick from the 25 yard line that counted four more, and it looked like the visitors were going to be sent home with nothing to their credit but one large goose egg. Subsequent developments proved this to be a fact, for it ended with the count 6 to 0.

While the boys have been playing good foot ball this year, it was hardly to be expected that they would carry off the honors in a contest with a city

ALTDORF

O. J. Leu of this place and A. T. Bean of Hansen attended a meeting of the officers of the Wood County Agricultural Association Monday. At that meeting it was decided to have a three day agricultural meeting about the middle of January at which there will be speakers from the University present. This meeting will be free to all and the two main topics to be emphasized this year will be soils and potatoes. There will be a one week course at Marshfield the fore part of December, similar to the one held in Grand Rapids last year. The school children's corn and oat contest will be held in connection with the Marshfield school. There will be no agricultural contest at Grand Rapids this year, but we want a good potato exhibit in connection with the three days' meeting.

Anna Ruess and Louisa Kinnings visited at the Robert Leu home last Sunday.

John Withelm sold a horse to Henry Peterson of Vesper.

Frank Huser sold a grade Holstein cow last week for $85.00 and yet some people think it doesn't pay to invest in a pure bred bull, when each half calf is worth $25.00 more than a scrub calf.

The Schiller boys are getting out rock for their new barn, which they will build next year, and Tony Wipfl is getting material ready for a silo.

A. Komatz was sick a few days the last week, but is better again.

"The sooner this case is ended the better it will be for all," says little Keelya. Are you ready for the question? The answer have it.

CHRISTMAS SEAL SALE STARTS SOON

Milwaukee, Wis., Nov. 3, 1915. (Special.)—A call for 1,400 local Campaign Managers to take charge of the sale of the Christmas Seals in different parts of the state has been issued by Otto F. Bradley, Campaign Manager of the Wisconsin Anti-Tuberculosis Association. This is the opening gun of the 1915 Seal Campaign by which the Association will raise funds for continuing during the coming year, the campaign that is doing so much for the eradication of preventable disease in Wisconsin.

Last year there were 1169 local managers in different localities but the Association expects to enlist at least 1,400 for the 1915 sale. There is something inspiring in fighting in line with the whole country, especially in Wisconsin, which has been the country in making the highest per capita sales in past years. He is a young man, a stranger in the community and recently hired out with a Thiden farmer.

Dr. Ellerson attended Miller at the hospital and found his head badly pounded up with six cuts on top and two on the face but no fractures. The doctor says the patient will come out safely if blood poisoning can be prevented.

A warrant for the arrest of Thorne was given by the sheriff and the officer searched the town of Thiden without finding the man.

THERE WAS NO FOOT RACE ABOUT THIS

La Crosse has come and gone, and they went the way of those that have gone before. It was only 9 to 0, in favor of the Grand Rapids boys, but that was enough to let the visitors know that we were on earth and still kicking.

It is understood, that the La Crosse boys came here with the expectation of running up a score of about fifty points on the locals while the home boys stood around the edge of the field and watched the fun. However, they were disappointed and it is probable that they went home with a considerable respect than they brought with them. Possibly our boys may have been a trifle anxious as to what the outcome of the game would be, but if they were they did not show it in their play, but started right in with their usual determination to either win the game or lose it fighting.

During the first quarter it looked as if possibly the visitors might be going to slip one over on our boys, as they got the ball down to the five yard line, but it was only a scare, and they were held there with no damage to the locals reputation, and the quarter ended 0 to 0.

In the second half, however, the locals seemed to realize that they were still on earth and in the game, and they went after the visitors like a lot of tigers and they were right after the big fellows at every turn. They were keeping the ball within friendly distance, of the La Crosse goal most of the time, so that the visitors had to play on the defensive, and when La Crosse punted Hill caught the ball and made a 50 yard run for a touchdown. Then somebody yelled, 6 to 0 at the end of the first half with the ball in La Crosse territory.

In the third quarter Nash made a drop kick from the 25 yard line that counted four more, and it looked like the visitors were going to be sent home with nothing to their credit but one large goose egg. Subsequent developments proved this to be a fact, for it ended with the count 6 to 6.

While the boys have been playing good foot ball this year, it was hardly to be expected that they would carry off the honors in a contest with a city

the size of La Crosse, where they have a great many more to pick from than in the case here. However, they are to be congratulated on the fact that they did win out in so clever a manner. As the recent Wausau game was decided in their favor it means that the boys have won every game they went into this year and have not been scored on the entire season. Next Saturday the boys will go to Merrill to play the team up there.

ALTDORF

O. J. Leu of this place and A. T. Bean of Hanson attended a meeting of the officers of the Wood County Agricultural Association Monday. At that meeting it was decided to have a three days' agricultural meeting about the middle of January at which there will be speakers from the University present. This meeting will be free to all and the two main topics to be discussed this year will be soils and potatoes. There will be a one week's course at Marshfield the fore part of December, similar to the one held in Grand Rapids last year. The school children's corn and oat contest will be held in connection with the Marshfield school. There will be no agricultural contest at Grand Rapids this year, but we want a good potato exhibit in connection with the three days' meeting.

Anna Ruess and Lenore Kinsinger visited at the Robert Leu home last Sunday. John Wilhelm sold a horse to Henry Peterson of Vesper. Frank Truser sold a grade Holstein cow last week for $45.00 and yet some people think it doesn't pay to invest in a pure bred bull, when each heifer calf is worth $25.00 more than a scrub calf. The Schlitter boys are getting out rock for their new barn, which they will build next year, and Tony Wipfl is getting material ready for a silo. A Kinsinger was sick a few days the last week, but is better again.

"The sooner this case is ended the better it will be for all," says little Evelyn. Are you ready for the question? The answer is—
